Defeated Liberal Bitter About Racial Prejudice

English-Canadian 'Ashamed'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Bureau

OTTAWA — "I am ashamed of being an English-Canadian."

Murray McBride, clergyman, former Conservative government assistant agricultural representative, and until the Oct. 30 election Liberal MP for the National Capital Region constituency of Lanark-Renfrew-Carlton was speaking.

He had been sitting there in his Centre Block office, which he had to vacate last night, disconsolately tossing files and letters into big cardboard boxes.

"Yes," he said, "you can write that down, please do—I am ashamed and humiliated for being an English-Canadian because in the election they responded from basic racial prejudice against French-Canada when the government had only been trying, in the name of national unity, to integrate all Canadians.

Here he paused and glancing impatiently at the newspaperman unhurriedly making notes, snapped, "Here, give me that pen and paper and I'll put it down for you in my own hand."

He did, and this is what he wrote:

"My real concern is that the day following the election there was a real sense of joy among some people that the 'French takeover' had been stopped.

"This is the really sad part of it all. The Liberals failed to appeal to the best instincts of English Canada and let the latent anti-French prejudice carry the day.

"A long rebuilding job is needed to get us going forward again.

"As never before the issue is national unity with the 'Separatists' not all in Quebec."

At this point McBride was interrupted by the question that if he was thinking of trying again in the next election, then wasn't he running the risk of destroying whatever chances he might have by speaking of English-Canadians — including a majority of his constituents—as bigots?

"It was bigotry, pure and simple," he retorted, "and as to whether I will run again, 'no comment.' At the moment let us say I am unemployed."

But was he serious, he was asked, to his claim that French-Canada was the only issue?

"Yes," he replied. "And if trying to hide from it, or be dishonest enought to deny it is the price you must pay to be a part of politics, then I don't know . . ."

There was not a single issue other than English Canada wanting, as he put it, "to put down Quebec?" he was asked.

"No other. It was the one overwhelming issue. The unemployment insurance abuses — no factor. The immigra-

Move Under Way

Servants To Join Federation

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — A move is underway to bring the 18,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union into the B.C. Federation of Labor.

If it comes about — and it is fully expected — it would be a major event for the federation since the BCGEU would be second only in size among affiliates to the International Woodworkers of America. The IWA has a B.C. membership of more than 35,000.

The federation covers 175,000 unionists, up from about 151,000 in a year.

The announcement was made by general secretary John Fryer in an address to the 17th annual convention of the federation.

He said the union's provincial executive has voted unanimously in favor of rejoining the federation. A membership vote on the question is to be conducted early next year.

"I am confident that the vote will be overwhelming in favor of reaffiliation, because our members realize that they owe a great deal to the B.C. Federation of Labor," he said.

The union was in the federation until 1960. Fryer said the Social Credit government "arbitrarily" discontinued payroll checkoff of union dues, a move that forced the BCGEU to leave the federation.

The reason given by the government for cancellation of dues checkoff, Fryer said, was the union's affiliation with the large labor body and the policy of supporting the NDP.

The checkoff system was restored six years later.

The union has remained an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress and its pre-

Israelis, Syrians Fire Away

From UPI

Syria and Israel Thursday fought with jets, tanks and artillery along the entire length of their border in the fiercest battle since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect 27 months ago.

Military spokesmen in Damascus said Syrians shot down four Israeli planes and lost two of their own. At least two of the Israeli crews went down with their planes, spokesmen said.

Tel Aviv spokesmen denied any aircraft were lost or even hit but said Israeli pilots downed two Syrian MiG-21s. They said one soldier and two civilians were wounded in a three-hour artillery duel with Syrian guns.

A senior Israeli officer said between 2,000 and 3,000 rounds of high explosive shells impacted on Israeli positions on a 25-mile front.

Both sides agreed that the fighting began with an early-afternoon Israeli aerial attack on two Syrian positions. It ended at dusk with what an Israeli officer called a tense quiet along the front.

During the peace interlude an Israeli officer said "the Syrians must ask themselves what they may suffer tomorrow if they continue to let the terrorists cross their border."

Israeli spokesmen said Arab guerrillas passed through the two attacked positions en route to fights in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights.

The attacking Israeli planes killed one soldier and wounded two others, spokesmen in Damascus said.

A Syrian spokesman said: "In retaliation to the Israeli attack at noon today on our frontline positions, our heavy artillery opened fire at 3 p.m."

The Israeli guns returned the fire.

Syrian spokesmen said the artillery was joined by firing from tank-mounted guns and the shooting spread up and down the entire Syrian-Israeli border.

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada set up 15 economic performance goals for Canada Thursday and one of them — cutting unemployment to 4.5 per cent of the labor force in 1975 — was immediately described as perhaps too difficult to achieve.

Dr. Andre Raynauld, chairman of the council, told a news conference the unemployment goal was set on the understanding that unemployment this year would run to about 5.6 per cent of the labor force.

Experience already has shown this to be too low. Unemployment in the first 10 months of the year averaged 6.3 per cent. Raynauld said this makes the goal for 1975 more difficult to achieve, and "it may perhaps be delayed a little."

The economic council says governments should hold the line on taxes in the next three years and perhaps even reduce them.

It also says the country can expand its tax-supported wel-

New Saigon Talks Key to Ceasefire

SAIGON (UPI) — White House emissary Gen. Alexander Haig today began crucial talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu which may determine the fate of a proposed ceasefire agreement.

Haig's talks with Thieu began about 11 a.m. at the presidential palace. It was Haig's ninth visit to Saigon and the second in about a month.

Thieu has been openly critical of the proposed truce agreement Henry Kissinger negotiated with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho in secret meetings in Paris.

In Paris, North Vietnam said Thursday there no longer can be an early peace in Vietnam, but the United States said it expects an agreement soon at the next meeting between negotiator Kissinger and Hanoi officials.

"Peace is not for tomorrow," said North Vietnam's negotiator, Nguyen Minh Vy, after the 166th session of the peace talks.

"The reason is simple. The United States refused to sign the peace agreement it has already agreed to."

The U.S. delegation was more optimistic after the regular talks session, which lasted a comparatively brief four hours.

The chief U.S. negotiator, Ambassador William Porter, expressed belief the talks were entering their final stages.

"With every passing day, peace comes perceptibly nearer," Porter said.

New Labor Laws Will Require Eighteen Months

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Staff

It will likely be at least 18 months and possibly two years before new B.C. labor laws are presented to the Legislature, Labor Minister William King said Thursday.

King gave the assessment—which contradicts earlier indications that a full-scale revision of the province's labor legislation might be dealt with by the next spring session—at a news conference called Thursday afternoon to announce Nov. 20 as the date on which the controversial B.C. Mediation Commission will cease to function.

On that date, when the new Mediation Services Act approved at a special session last month comes into effect, the three commissioners — chairman John Parker, Pen Baskin and Alistair Pollock — will leave those posts.

King confirmed he has met three times with the commissioners to discuss the terms of settlement for their dismissal but he refused to discuss details until agreement is reached. Parker was hired in 1968 at a salary of $42,500 a year and the other two members at $40,000 each.

The minister added despite reports that the commissioners were given a seven-year contract beginning in 1968 he felt the government

'Brother' Up, Up And Away

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (CP) — Canada's first domestic communications satellite, Anik — Eskimo for "brother" — roared into orbit atop a Delta rocket Thursday night in the first stage of a plan to bring space-age communications to the Canadian North.

Erroneous indications of trouble in the launch vehicle and in the guidance system of the satellite delayed the launch, originally scheduled for 3:20 p.m. PST.

Two Ottawa Grants Killed by Kickbacks

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal regional expansion department has cancelled two incentive grants because it has determined that an unidentified government employee received kickbacks from the companies who were to have received the money.

The grants — one of $617,000 toward a silver refinery and the other of $119,000 toward construction of a commercial mint — had been accepted by Silver Shields Mines Inc., and the Jacques Cartier Mint Inc.

They were to have supported construction of a complex in Cobalt, Ont.

Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand said in a news release Wednesday:

"An investigation of circumstances surrounding the decisions to make the two incentive offers had led to the conclusion that an officer in a responsible position in the department (who is no longer employed by the department) had been offered and received improper benefits from a person or persons associated with the companies."

Best Seller Concludes:

Men Slaves, Women Exploiters

LONDON (AP) — The American male is the most oppressed man in the Western world, says the author of a book that also argues men are really slaves and women their exploiters.

Esther Vilar, author of The Manipulated Man, also thinks that women are stupid and getting more so every day; that men are brilliant but locked into stultifying jobs; that housework is a pleasure and men are deprived of it and that all of this stems from mothers who condition their children into manipulative and slave roles.

The book was originally published in West Germany where it made the best-seller list before it was launched in other countries.

In London, novelist Kingsley Amis called it "total twaddle" and one reviewer wrote "to know her is to hate her." But others praised the book as the best argument yet against women's lib.

Miss Vilar actually wrote the book in New York almost two years ago during a five-month visit.

Basically her theory is that the male is brilliant and capable of doing great things with his freedom but his intelligent thoughts frighten him. He seeks the security of the enslaved and marries.

"In no other country do mothers so pitilessly train the male infant to perform," Miss Vilar says. "No other society exists where the male sexual drive is exploited for money so unscrupulously."

Girls, though born intelligent, Miss Vilar says, are taught they don't have to think because men are going to work for them. Their goal is to find a man to do this.

Miss Vilar, 37, was born in Argentina of German parents who were divorced when she was three years old.

After graduating from medical school she practised for one year, then studied psychology and sociology and became a sales representative for a pharmaceutical company so she could support her writing career.

In 1961, she married Klaus Wagn, a German writer. They were divorced two years later after the birth of a son, Martin, now nine. Miss Vilar says her former husband is still the most important man in her life. When she is away publicizing her books, he lives in her home to care for their son.

tion chaos — a zero consideration. High taxes and living costs —not a question. The prime minister's supposed discounting of the work ethic — a phony issue.

Well, how did he feel, and had he spoken out at the conference the Liberal caucus had with the defeated candidates?

He had said his piece, "and I feel satisfied — for there is something worth defeat and that is the defence of the language thing, a noble cause, vital to the survival of the nation."

Had there been anything else beside "bigotry" accountable for his defeat and other Liberal losses in eastern Ontario?

"Yes," he replied, "the press, specially the Ottawa Journal, practising another form of bigotry.

"When Lewis spoke the Journal ran a flattering picture and gave him good coverage on the front page.

"When John Turner or the PM refuted his nonsense, the Journal — and most other newspapers — gave them unflattering pictures and shoved them back on the inside pages.

"The Liberal defeat was due to raw racial prejudice seeping up from the press to the public or perhaps it was leakage down from the public to the press.

"It was bare-faced hatred, fear and animosity."

fare system without increasing tax rates.

The goals for the next years include increases in the gross national product of 6 per cent a year, increases of 10 per cent a year in investment in new industrial plant and equipment, and increases of not more than 5 per cent a year in total outlays by all governments.

The council called for 5 per-cent annual improvement in productivity in manufacturing, 4.7-per-cent annual increases in after-tax incomes, and not more than 3 per-cent increases each year in the over-all level of prices.

The report was released as consumer prices rose last month as higher clothing prices and costs of home ownership outweighed a seasonal drop in food prices.

Statistics Canada reported Thursday the general price index based on 1961 prices equalling 100 rose to 142 for October from 141.8 in September, a gain of one-10th of 1 per cent. The consumer price level was .3 per cent higher than a year earlier.

Vox Populi

I CAN NOT get myself overly aroused by author Farley Mowat's dogged stand re whales in captivity. I'm sorry that Chimo succumbed to infection and that Haida has become listless or despondent as a result. If pinned down, I would probably vote against capture and imprisonment of whales, bears, hyenas, rhinos, lions — any of nature's noble creatures.

But at this moment there are more pressing problems involving human beings. The Nixon victory leaves me with long-range hope for improvement in law and order south of the 49th and it is common for such improvement to eventually seep across into our country.

THE CITIZENS of California voted to reintroduce the death penalty for people convicted of first degree murder. This, of course, was only a local vote — the U.S. Supreme Court has outlawed the death penalty — but it should give that august body cause for second thought.

If a sizeable segment of the population wants the death penalty re-introduced, then it should be implemented. The voice of the people, unless they've struck that bit about government by the people, for the people. We have too often seen cases where elected officials, or appointed jurists have noted the public's wishes only to proceed with their own wishes instead.

THE ROLE of legislator is to carry out the express wishes of his constituents and judges are no less bound by those wishes. California has shown the way. It could well be different in plebiscites in other states, it could well be the 50 states combined would add up to a different conclusion than the one reached by California voters.

However, this is precisely the tack that should be taken. It should be given over to vox populi because people are the governing ones. Elected officials are merely their mouthpieces. Any other way it ceases to be democracy.

THE FIVE-YEAR trial ban on the death penalty in Canada is just about up. The legislators will review and make the decision to either re-introduce or to continue the ban. But that decision should not be made without the full force of public opinion. It is wrong for elected representatives to make this decision without absolute prior knowledge of the feelings of those who put them in office. In this area, we should demand of both Donald Munro and Allan McKinnon, that they do the proper homework before casting yea or nay ballots. Guessing the will of the people is not good enough.

GUESSING the will of the people was obviously not good enough in another state — Colorado. The wheels there allocated huge sums of tax money for the right to hold the 1976 Winter Olympic Games in Denver. They did it without asking. So Coloradons went to the polls and by a margin of better than 3-2, said no, we do not want to spend large sums of money for fun and games when there are more pressing needs for that money.

But already Vancouver Mayor Tom Campbell and some of the athletic powers, like Bob Hindmarsch, have stated they will now press for the Colorado rejection to be turned over to Canada and for the games to be staged at Garibaldi Park.

WHAT RIGHT have they to spend our money in this fashion? They have not asked us, they are assuming; and assumption, as in the case of the death penalty, is not good enough when it becomes a question of doling out $100 or more millions of dollars.

The NDP government of British Columbia does not know the citizens' thoughts on the matter. The tenuous Liberal government of Canada does not know the will of the people.

We are already unfortunately committed to upwards of $250 million for the 1976 Summer Olympics — again, without so much as a by-your-leave.

PREMIER BARRETT has at least adopted a cautious attitude. He says he will not commit money to the Garibaldi possibility until he finds out exactly what monies would be necessary.

I would respectfully suggest that when he does find out the approximate cost (because in Olympic Games expenditures, nothing can be exact) he should then put it to the people. His mandate said nothing about such frilly spending.

Our say in government has been sadly eroded. It's time the shoe was moved over to the other foot.

'Recessive Genes'

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I know you shouldn't (and sometimes by law cannot) marry your first cousin because similarity of genes would cause damage to children.

But does this hold true for second and third cousins? My cousin and I plan to marry but are hesitating until we've heard the facts. Could you help us out? — S.A.D.

Marriage of cousins—first or otherwise—doesn't necessarily mean that children will be defective, but the risk is much higher.

Why? Because there are genes known as "recessive genes" which indicate a trait or characteristic of one sort of another that is minor and tends to be blotted out. Doubtless we all have them, but being "recessive" these traits tend to take a back seat and eventually disappear.

Tend to die out, that is, EXCEPT if the same recessive gene is carried by BOTH parents rather than just one, then the recessive genes reinforce each other.

If a potentially dangerous trait is involved, the baby, instead of having the trait in mild form, is likely to have it very strongly. As an example, cousins having a relatively mild eye disorder might have a baby with a severe eye disorder. I have seen children going blind from that particular circumstance.

Of course the problem isn't limited to eye defects. That's just one example.

You may ask, "But can't people have similar recessive genes even if they AREN'T cousins?" Yes, it can happen by chance, but it happens much more frequently with cousins, because they have such similar ancestry. The closer the relationship, the greater the danger.

But can't GOOD traits be reinforced? Yes, that can happen, too, but the danger is that weak traits (recessive genes) are not likely to be recognized ahead of time. Not recognized by the average person, that is. Experience shows it happens, and that is why so many states flatly forbid marriage of first cousins.

Skull B Of Olde

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anthropologist Richard Leakey announced Thursday the discovery of what he believes is the oldest complete skull of early man, a large-brained, tool-using human being who lived at least 2.5 million years ago in East Africa.

The new find also is about 1.5 million years the oldest universally recognized fossil relics of humanity, those of a species called homo erectus.

The new find also is about half a million years older than the controversial homo habilis discovered by the late Louis Leakey and thought by him to be the first tool-wielding ancestor of modern man.

Richard Leakey is the son of Louis, who died last month after a long career of digging for human fossils in Tanzania's Olduvai Gorge. In 1964 Louis Leakey gave the species name of homo habilis to a two-million-year-old pigmy that he considered to be a direct progenitor of today's homo sapiens.

Some anthropologists accepted the new species. Others refused, arguing that homo habilis was not much different from Australopithecus, a pre-man fossil of similar age. This left million-year-old homo erectus, represented by Java man, Peking man and other ancients, as the oldest human fossils generally accepted by scientists.

The young Leakey did his digging in a wind-swept, scrub-covered, bandit-infested desert east of Lake Rudolf in Kenya about 500 miles north of Olduvai Gorge.

As administrative director of the national museums of Kenya, he was joined in the expedition to the largely unexplored Lake Rudolf region by Dr. Glynn Isaac of the University of California at Berkeley.

The younger Leakey did not claim to have discovered a new species of man. He did

Cabinet Meets

Session: No Decision

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and his cabinet met for four hours Thursday and, although they talked about the contents of the next throne speech, there was no decision on when Parliament would meet.

Trudeau told reporters: "We didn't reach discussing dates yet — we're still building the speech from the throne."

Asked whether the throne speech opening the next Parliament will be dramatically different, the prime minister said Parliament itself will be dramatically different but he couldn't say what the still-to-be-written throne speech would be like. It would include measures which developed from the recent general election campaign "and measures which haven't been talked about."

There were reports that a majority of ministers favored a January meeting of Parliament, but that a close eye was being kept on pressures — public or political — that might develop in favor of a December opening.

Trudeau was asked whether a budget could be expected early in the session. He said a budget could be expected, but whether it would be early or late depended on when the House sat.

Would the 3-per-cent increase in income taxes still go into effect Jan. 1?

"If we make a decision, it won't be announced in this way."

Reporters were kept back from cabinet room doors Thursday after security officers claimed that one reporter got far enough through a door last week to read headings on cabinet documents.

Security officers kept reporters at least six feet from the nearest doorway leading into the cabinet room. Thus ministers who wanted to escape questioning could simply walk straight across the hall to a stairway.

The new find also is about half a million years older than the controversial homo habilis discovered by the late Louis Leakey and thought by him to be the first tool-wielding ancestor of modern man.

Richard Leakey is the son of Louis, who died last month after a long career of digging for human fossils in Tanzania's Olduvai Gorge. In 1964 Louis Leakey gave the species name of homo habilis to a two-million-year-old pigmy that he considered to be a direct progenitor of today's homo sapiens.

Some anthropologists accepted the new species. Others refused, arguing that homo habilis was not much different from Australopithecus, a pre-man fossil of similar age. This left million-year-old homo erectus, repesented by Java man, Peking man and other ancients, as the oldest human fossils generally accepted by scientists.

The young Leakey did his digging in a wind-swept, scrub-covered, bandit-infested desert east of Lake Rudolf in Kenya about 500 miles north of Olduvai Gorge.

As administrative director of the national museums of Kenya, he was joined in the expedition to the largely unexplored Lake Rudolf region by Dr. Glynn Isaac of the University of California at Berkeley.

The younger Leakey did not claim to have discovered a new species of man. He did say at a London scientific meeting that the Lake Rudolf discovery "is almost certainly the oldest complete skull of early man."

He noted that stone tools found in the region had been dated by radiation methods as being older than 2.5 million years.

Doctors Invited To Vietnam

NEW YORK (UPI)—Senator Edward Kennedy has received an invitation for a team of American doctors to assess North Vietnam's postwar medical needs, a prominent New York doctor said. "The invitation is a hopeful sign that we will soon be done with the work of war and begin the work of peace," said Dr. Joseph English, head of the city's health and hospital agency. English said he would head a team of five doctors on a week-long visit to North Vietnam.

A Matter of Evolution

THE REMARK OF FORMER NDP LEADER T. C. Douglas, now sitting as member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, that the scheduled increase in personal income tax would not materialize next January may be taken as an indication that his party, holding the balance of power in the Commons, will impose its will upon the government on issues heretofore not even subject to debate. Not that the prime minister's decisions have not been challenged. It has been, and remains, one of Conservative leader Robert Stanfield's top priorities that there shall be no income tax increase. Rather, the Conservatives would reduce the levy as a means of increasing spending power and bolstering the economy.

However reluctantly, Mr. Trudeau will have to comply with a demand that he reform his income tax policy along the lines advocated by Mr. Stanfield but on the insistence of David Lewis, the leader of the NDP. Thus Mr. Trudeau will avoid defeat in the Commons while Mr. Lewis piously accumulates whatever political prestige he can for his persuasiveness.

Mr. Trudeau, however, is adroit enough to grab more credit than is due him in such circumstances. He has adopted, in his public appearances since the general election, an attitude of penitence. He is the chastened, contrite character who wants to make amends. He admits his mistakes, and perhaps the income tax policy was one of them.

Having confessed his error, in the accepted Maoist form, he might go Mr. Lewis one better and introduce amendments that would give him all the political advantage. If it's a good thing to cut personal income tax, why not do a thorough job of it and perhaps compensate by boosting the corporation levy? That's the sort of manoeuvre that would win the limping Liberals a chance to recover first place next time around the course.

Mr. Stanfield is on record to the effect that he would sacrifice none of his political principles in order to attain or retain office. Mr. Trudeau has got to do the opposite, or convince the country that he now believes his previous theorizing was wrong but that he happily amends it.

This cannot be a comfortable way to govern.

The public will accept the reversal of policy in this instance because it means money in the pocket. But how far can a government go in compromising with the opposition without losing the respect of the electorate and the confidence of an already disenchanted people?

There is a certain kinship, but has Liberalism gone so far to the left that it can have a happy partnership with Mr. Lewis' brand of socialism? If that is the case then the time is approaching — it may already have arrived — when a political polarization will result in a completely new alignment.

Canada may be about to see emergence of two political entities: socialism and state ownership on the one hand; free enterprise and planned development on the other.

That is where Great Britain has arrived. And the indications in this country are that the same evolutionary forces are at work. Perhaps it would be a good thing to stimulate them during the approaching session of Parliament.

Party First

IT IS BECOMING frighteningly clear that Prime Minister Trudeau has decided that Parliament will not meet until well into the new year. Under the existing rules and regulations applying to the situation, he is perfectly within his rights to follow this course.

However, if such is his decision it must be recognized that it has been reached through partisan political considerations with little or no thought given to the existing condition of the country or the welfare of its citizens.

Certainly, judging by remarks made by Mr. Trudeau and other members of his much-reduced caucus following its meeting, the Liberals are not at all desirous of the calling together of Parliament until the party has drafted a completely new program which not only will appeal to the electorate and be acceptable to the opposition parties but will reflect more than a mere modicum of glory upon the government.

As satisfying as this method of action might be to the Liberal party it is hardly likely to be happily received by the opposition parties or the general public who might justifiably feel that the reaching of partisan political goals should now run second to the urgent necessity off dealing with national problems immediately.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield may well have been voicing the feeling of the majority of Canadians when he demanded an early recall of Parliament and said: "It's not enough to see Mr. Trudeau make a public confession. We want action, and we're going to see that we get it."

Though it may mean little to Mr. Trudeau and his party it may come as something of a shock to the average Canadian to realize that if the House of Commons does not meet until January it means that Canada will have been without a Parliament for more than four months.

Surely it is time for the Liberals to be taught that Parliament and the welfare of Canadians are not toys to be played with or abandoned as the whim strikes them.

Reform of the Common Market Planned

Left-Wingers' Eyes on 'Rich Men's Club'

By NEAL ASCHERSON from London

"Somewhere in Europe" is all the public can know about the place in which the Spanish Communists recently met in secret congress. The party is banned and its leadership remains abroad. But most of the 104 delegates to this eighth congress of the party made their way from Spain itself.

Wherever in Europe the congress did take place, it showed that the Spanish Communists are developing new ideas towards the continent. The congress endorsed a resolution calling for the gradual association of Spain with the European Economic Community.

This was a more remarkable decision than it may appear — and it carries all the weight of the most highly organized opposition movement in Spain. Of course, the days when the Communist parties of the original Six all opposed the Treaty of Rome are past. Today, both the Italian and the French Communists, for example, accept the existence of the Community but intend to democratize and socialize its supranational head and its national limbs. The Spanish Communist Party, led by the intelligent and flexible Santiago Carillo, is no less open-minded than the Italians — and no less ready to rebuke the Soviet Union when it thinks fit. But for Communists and Social Democrats, Spain's approach to the Common Market raises rather special problems.

Shortly before the Norwegian referendum on whether to join the Community, President Pompidou of France suggested in public that Franco's Spain should be brought closer to the Common Market. Horror among Norway's morally strict, deeply serious and anti-fascist Social Democrats probably contributed to the national "No." Indeed, fear in liberal northern nations of joining a Catholic-authoritarian block eventually to be dominated by Adenauer, de Gaulle and Franco played a strong part in keeping the Scandinavians, especially, apart from the Community in earlier years. It is therefore all the more interesting that the Spanish Communists have now decided that some association of Spain with the Common Market serves their cause.

Their argument is that Spain's inefficient economic system cannot survive alone, and yet must be overhauled drastically before it is fit to cope with the competition of the Nine. It will become clear, the party hopes, that only "a democratic state" can undertake "this task of modernization, giving priority to the public sector." In other words, the overthrow of the Franco regime is the precondition of economic modernization.

The Communist parties of Western Europe, and the trade union movements to which they are affiliated, are becoming the focus of what one can call a "Community opposition." These forces want to democratize the whole supranational bureaucracy, subordinating it to popular control of some kind, and eventually to break down the whole rich-man's-fortress aspect of a Community closed by tariff walls against the less fortunate world outside.

This year's election program of the Italian Communist Party, for example, proposed "a truly representative European Parliament, invested with effective powers of initiative and control, proportionately elected by direct universal suffrage." The EEC should be converted into "an element in the process of overcoming the opposing blocs (in Europe) rather than a closed, autarkic bloc itself."

The French Communists recently worked out a common election platform for a Communist-Socialist coalition government. This program, published in June, commits such a government to work within the EEC with the long-term aim of "freeing it from the domination of big capital, democratizing its institutions, backing the demands of the workers and steering Community activities according to their interests." Trade unions are to form half the members of the EEC Economic and Social Council, and farmers are to have equal voting power with national government delegates in the Common Agricultural Fund. The Community's budget would be placed firmly under the executive control of elected representatives.

The Italians, in particular, look forward to using the Community framework to achieve a unification of the whole West European working-class movement. "It is our conviction," said Enrico Berlinguer, the first secretary, talking at his party congress in Milan in March, "that the left-wing forces and the workers' organizations are being left behind compared to the processes of international integration which are being directed by the big economic groups and the political forces which defend their interests. The European working class has an immense potential of combative energy . . . the great goal is that of building a new, peaceful democratic Europe that marches towards Socialism."

Is it, then, a mere "rich mens' club" which the three new Community members have entered? If that is true, all the signs are that the European Left, deciding so late that the Common Market can be better changed than resisted, may eventually alter the club's rules out of all recognition.

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Empress Catherine the Great of Russia died 176 years ago today — in 1796 — of apoplexy. After marrying the heir to the Russian throne and waiting 17 years for him to succeed Empress Elizabeth, it was only months after his accession that she deposed him and seized power for herself, in the name of religion. She then ruled Russia for 34 years, proving to be an excellent monarch and working sometimes 15 hours a day.

1953 — Canada's military base at Soest, Germany, was opened.

From The Toronto Globe and Mail

The Manchester Guardian Weekly reports that, while it has been known for some time that the United States has trained dolphins and whales for underwater military roles, and has been rumored to have experimented even with skunks in defence of the fatherland, it has been left to Algerian military intelligence to uncover the latest example of U.S. ingenuity.

According to the Algerians, the Central Intelligence Agency has recruited flies to which microscopic transmitters have been attached to act as spies. The mind boggles. Imagine pressing — figuratively, of course — into service a winged agent able to infiltrate innocently the most secret military and governmental establishment. That fly buzzing in the general's ear, or walking innocently on his toast, could be sending a country's most secret of secrets direct to the Pentagon.

Of course, flies being flies, who can guarantee they will choose the general's bedroom in preference to the kitchen or the back alleys of his establishment? More likely for the Pentagon to hear the curses of the kitchen help or the squish and rustle of garbage as its brave spies hover around the food and the refuse. Or will CIA agents demand danger pay when, earphones affixed to catch some world-shaking secret, their eardrums are punctured by the amplified sound of a hearty swat as one of their winged agents too carelessly tickles the general's face?

Not least of all, will the day dawn when the ultimate declaration of loyalty in enemy camps will be — "There ain't no flies on me"?

Feelings Of People

Is life the school of hard knocks or is it the school of intelligent human planning?

What should be the national emphasis: (competitive) manoeuvring of earth resources, or sensitive recognition of individual human capacities?

High school students in a local department store earn $1.90 per hour for stock-taking; a worker in her thirties accepting shift work and running her legs off in a retirement home, earns $1.50 an hour. Are the people in a retirement home entitled to a worker who has poise and inner composure because she is able to meet her own needs adequately, and because she herself feels valued and suitably rewarded for her efforts?

Perhaps there should be a suffering bonus (like an isolation bonus) for persons who, because of our mismanagement of human resources, are forced to earn their livelihood at job situations not well-suited to their skills and interests.

The other day, an adult walking along the street, said to the child beside her, who had spontaneously started crying, "Oh, it's only your feelings that are hurt." Are Canadians people who recognize feelings as the stuff of communication with the universe and with others?

Swiss Watches

Re the article about watches, Oct. 28, the Swiss seem determined to confuse the public about the advent of electronic and quartz watches. For one thing there are shockproof watches of the quartz type on the market in Canada now, made in Switzerland by the Girard-Perregaux Co. These are also anti-magnetic and waterproof. It is true that quartz crystals age, however this process is very slow and the watches are equipped with a trimmer capacitor to compensate for any changes in the crystal's state. The amazing thing about quartz watches is their accuracy; plus or minus a minute a year is guaranteed by the better quality models.

It seems strange that the Swiss should release a press report which downgrades their industry just at a time when they seem to be coming back strong after a period in the doldrums.

Another error in the report refers to the mechanical watch as a pin-lever watch. I'm sure they meant to say jewelled lever. Pin-lever movements are used in only the very cheapest watches, $5 to $15 price range.

I'm sending a copy of this letter to The Watchmakers of Switzerland Information Centre in Toronto and hope it results in a more optimistic report in the near future.

The Uplands

As a citizen of Oak Bay, an alderman, and as an architect, I believe your reporter missed the point of Dr. Forward's lecture, and turned a talk on planning into his own essay on social issue. The tone was set by a denigrating headline snatched from a casual remark without substantiating data.

I do not live in the Uplands and it would be insulting to suggest that the residents need me to defend them. However, when the terms "unstable socially," "ghetto" and "poor friendship, poor commitment and little feeling" are used in an article about a self-renewing, generally single family residential area, I must challenge them. The fact that a community resists its own destruction does not make it a ghetto, and this applies well past the borders of Uplands.

In his lecture Dr. Forward suggested the Uplands was a unique residential area because it defied the usual pattern of decay and change through infiltration by commercial buildings and multi-use dwellings.

In my opinion this desire to maintain an existing character is not unique to the Uplands, therefore the comments made on the cost to residents and society are a challenge to other areas with similar aspirations. Much of Oak Bay is single family, self-renewing and resistant to disruption of its environment and its character. This is not a matter of property value or social position, but recognition of the human value of a particular physical environment. This attitude is not limited to Uplands or Oak Bay. For example, the citizens of James Bay are currently trying to obtain recognition of the special character of their area and the citizens of Toronto stopped the Spadina Highway for similar reasons.

A happy accident of history and geography created the community of Oak Bay and much of it is now physically and financially irreplaceable if destroyed. I do not suggest it is the only type of community that is valuable or workable, but it must have merit as a preferred example of physical layout and balance because so many people spend so much time, money and effort maintaining it. Until recently all well established single family residential areas were under attack as being a poor tax base. It is now accepted that the economics of various forms of development tend to balance out in terms of taxes. What concerns me now is the possible development of a new line of attack on the established single family home area. Is the new claim going to be that it is anti-social and produces little involvement in local affairs? I doubt that any member of Oak Bay Council, or any developer who has requested rezoning here would agree that this way of life produces "poor commitment and little feeling" in the citizens . . .

I enjoyed and benefited from the papers presented by Dr. Forward and the other speakers, and believe the university is making a tremendously useful contribution to the community through this type of seminar.

What I take issue with is the impression I gained from your article that an attractive, family community that defends its environment is some sort of expensive anti-social joke. On the contrary, such a community is one of the hardest things in the world to find and maintain today, and it is no laughing matter to citizens anywhere.

D. S. McLELLAND,

Alderman, Oak Bay.

Extra Care

A recent Colonist news story told of the trials and tribulations of the Nanaimo-Gabriola ferry. The author of the article, in telling of the series of adventures, or misadventures, of the vessel expressed surprise that a seaman would be posted on lookout in fog on a radar equipped vessel.

It may well be noted that radar is considered an aid to navigation and in periods of reduced visibility in fog, snow, etc. the required cautionary measures of safe and prudent navigation call for a lookout to be kept despite the presence of radar. The posting of a lookout man provides ears, a feature absent on radar; and a lookout will detect the sound and bearing of the whistle of other vessels; or fog horns and buoys. His "Mark 1 eyeballs" may also detect the presence of small boats or logs that are close-to and below the vertical range of arc of the radar scanner.

Where passenger ships are concerned, the sea-borne public should take comfort in the knowledge that, despite modern aids to navigation, the time honored and sound practices of good navigation and seamanship are still adhered to.

Thank You

You have, no doubt, lost count of the times you have been approached to support yet another "worthy cause." Your reactions to these requests will vary according to your interest, your knowledge, whether the Canadiens have just pulled out a squeaker over Boston, or, in the case of Miles for Millions, on the persistence of your children.

With overseas projects there is often a vagueness and lack of immediacy about the whole thing. They are, after all, far away peoples in far away lands. And who is to say that the money will reach suitable and deserving hands? And how much is lost in "administrative expenses?" And many other such questions, as well I know.

An incredibly long trail of chance and coincidence found me in Mount Hagen, the administrative centre for the Western Highlands District in the land now officially known as Papua, New Guinea. Mount Hagen is often an uncomfortable place to live in for it combines the problems of an urban area in an underdeveloped nation with that of a boom town where most of the bosses are white.

On September 29 the newest building in Mount Hagen was officially opened. The Mount Hagen branch of the YMCA staffed entirely by Papua New Guineans and designed to meet some of the needs of the town's large transient and overwhelmingly youthful population — came into being. Most of the money came from Canada. A large part of the Canadian money came from Miles for Millions. A small portion of that money came from the 1971 march in Victoria. A very small portion of that money probably came from you.

Your money has been spent. It has been spent well. And I have been asked to say thank you.

Thank you.

BRUCE A. McKEAN,

Shipping

Regarding the article about unions pressing Ottawa for a merchant fleet, didn't Canada have one once? I seem to remember that the last fleet was Canada Steamship Lines which ran from East Coast ports to the West Indies and which, after a long and disastrous strike, sold the fleet. Costs, principally wages, are too high to enable Canada to compete with foreign lines.

Why should the general public subsidize this high-priced help by excluding foreign ships from our coastal waters.

After Four Years Nixon Remains a Mystery

The President Nobody Knows

President Nixon did not electioneer. He restated his well-known positions in a flurry of radio talks and stumped a few states like a skilled performer.

By JAMES MACGREOR BURNS
Political Scientist and Author
From Williamstown, Mass.

After Franklin D. Roosevelt's famous Madison Square Garden speech of 1936 — "for all these things we have only just begun to fight" — there could be no doubt about the liberal direction of his second term.

Nor was there any doubt, after their re-election campaigns, of Harry Truman's commitment to a Fair Deal, of Dwight Eisenhower's centrist philosophy, of Lyndon Johnson's concern for health, welfare, and education.

But in this strange campaign the greatest anomaly was that the president running for his second term was less known than the senator running for his first.

Ordinarily the record of a first term gives a good idea of the shape of a second. Could Nixon's?

In effect he has followed a wavering double track — of economic controls and anticontrols, of mining the harbors of one communist nation while planning to visit an allied communist power, of fiscal orthodoxy and radically unbalanced budget, of foreign deals and economic isolationism, of welfare and anti-welfare.

In is said that he would like to rebuild the Republican party, but in the just-concluded campaign he failed even to extend his coattails to the vast majority of his fellow candidates for national office. But the problem of consistency remains.

Nixon has instantly become a lame duck. Save for Eisenhower, who never seemed to care, Nixon is the first lame duck president in American history.

He is no longer under the whip of having to satisfy at least a majority of the voters. What kind of Nixon will develop in this kind of political void?

Much will depend on the outcome of the ventures on which he has staked his place in history.

"We are like a tightrope walker crossing a chasm," Henry Kissinger suddenly remarked to me during a White House interview a year and a half ago.

"We know all the horrors that lie below." But a tightrope walker, he added, "cannot move jerkily. He must show some assurance."

One is haunted by this remark as the president embarks in Vietnam on the riskiest diplomatic gamble of his career.

He may succeed, as he did in his Peking and Moscow initiatives. More likely he will fail because a cease-fire, even if it is achieved, cannot be policed without troops, and the troops are gone.

And if he fails in Vietnam or in the Middle East, or if his economic program collapses, what new Nixon would be revealed?

Close Nixon watchers agree on at least one thing: this is a president who above all fears being considered soft or impotent, who transforms the nation's crises into personal "testings" of himself and who in the face of rebuffs and frustrations finds himself in action — perhaps any kind of action.

Second terms are hard on even the strongest of presidents. At the very least Nixon might be so frustrated as to encourage a move to repeal the 22nd amendment so that he could gain vindication at the polls in 1976. At worst, he might react to a collapse in Vietnam not with a policy but with a spasm — perhaps even with military re-escalation.

We cannot say for this is a solitary, enignostic figure, this man whom we still do not understand after his 26 years in politics and his years in the White House.

His tightrope performance over the chasm could be superb theatre. But it is for real, and when this performer falls, the nation goes down with him.

Inequality Inevitable?

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Washington

A sign of the times as portentious as the U.S. presidential election is the recent emergence of that rare thing in America, a group of conservative thinkers.

I have in mind the group of professors, mainly from Harvard, if you'll pardon the expression, who are connected with the quarterly periodical, The Public Interest. In the current issue, articles by Profs. Daniel Bell, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Seymour Martin Lipset and James Q. Wilson offer what amounts to a new conservative creed — an ethos for the modern era.

The starting point is a sociologically informed view of inequality. Prof. Bell, in a fascinating article from a forth-coming book on the post-industrial society, demolishes two fashionable views of how equality may be achieved.

Education Questioned

One is the view, dominant in the administrations of Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, that equality of individual opportunity can be secured through educational reform. Bell cites the recent work of James Coleman and Christopher Jencks to show that inequality is not mainly a question of education.

He demonstrates that inequality is rooted not only in differences between individuals but in differences between groups. Distinctions in family, ethnic and economic background, indeed, are so pervasive that they dominate achievement in school and after school. Even if a society based entirely on individual achievement were established, it would be manifestly unfair.

The second view popular among some minority organizations, emphasizes achieving equality of results from particular groups rather than equality of opportunity for individuals. Its favorite device is the quota system, asserting that earmarked places in society have to be reserved for particular bunches of peoople.

The trouble with that approach is that it inevitably sets group against group. As soon as one minority stakes out a preserve, others are bound to retaliate in competitive fashion.

The result is an increase of tension, not unfamiliar these days. "The history of almost all societies shows," Bell writes, "that when politics polarize along a single overriding dimension — be it class, religion, language, tribe or ethnic group — there is bound to be violent conflict."

What emerges from this showing is a reaffirmation of the classic conservative tenet — the belief that a certain inequality is inevitable, even beneficial. As Bell puts it:

"There cannot be complete democratization in the entire range of human activities . . . One wants entrepreneurs and innovators who can expand the amount of productive wealth for society. One wants men in public office who can govern well . . . A society that does not have its best men at the head of its leading institutions is a sociological and moral absurdity."

But having asserted the basic case for inequality, Bell and the others go on to point out ways in which inequalities can be tempered in the interest of a fairer society.

In this respect they are far more germane to present needs than the sour conservatives of yore with their emphasis on economic privilege and the phrasemakers of television and the syndicated columns whose stock in trade is to put down liberal folly.

The new conservative thinkers emphasize the priority of diminishing unfairness by economic adjustment. It is no accident that Moynihan is identified with the plan for transforming welfare into a system of guaranteed annual payments, and it seems clear that assuring the very poorest persons a basic minimum in the way of food, housing and health care is the central legislative priority of the present time.

Restraint Called For

An even more basic requirement, as Moynihan and others have repeatedly pointel out, is for what they call "civility."

Because we are a society of different conflicting groups, because a certain inequality is necessary, we have to maintain a special restraint towards one another.

There is little room for boastful self-glorification of one group or one leader at the expense of another. The new conservative thinkers seem particularly germane at the present juncture because, whatever else may happen in the next four years, it will count for little if honesty and decency are not restored to civil discourse.

'Historical' Nixon Awaited

President Nixon's landslide victory in the American election has come as no surprise to the world at large.

By CY FOX, from London

But there is much anticipation about what new momentum the Nixon foreign policy might assume in the period immediately ahead.

This is particularly the case in the matter of peace in Vietnam, which — only a few weeks ago — seemed possible even before the election.

It soon became obvious that, despite the highly-publicized international expeditions of presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, a Vietnam ceasefire was slightly less imminent than at first seemed the case.

The Democrats quickly attacked the president's talk of "peace with honor" as a cynical ploy.

The months to come should be interesting insofar as they prove or disporve this allegation.

In any case, Nixon's last four years in the White House mark a significant period of development in American foreign policy.

Whether the president was an active agent in this change or no more than the instrument of greater historical forces, there is irony in the fact that American moves towards reconciliation with Mao Tse-tung's China and better relations with Russia should have been made during the incumbency of this one-time crusader against world communism.

The latest instance of an easing in the chronic tensions associated with the cold war period has been the agreement between the East and West German governments on a basic treaty which would establish a large degree of normality in their mutual relations.

Even this could not have come without at least the acquiescence of Washington.

What will engage the attentions of most European diplomatic observers is the extent to which Washington facilitates the holding of the projected European security conference — together with such agreements as those governing mutual and balanced force reductions in Europe.

Yet predictions about what Nixon now is calling "a new generation of peace" also extend to the Middle East.

In Tel Aviv, new American moves aimed at finding a solution to the Middle East crisis are being suggested despite the lack of optimism about their speedy success.

Thus, hopes around the world are cautiously high for the next half of Nixon's term, even though some of the reservations about the president personally seem to be widely shared.

Finally released as he is from direct electoral pressures, the American chief of state will almost certainly be acting to secure a place for himself in the diplomatic history books — and that alone may be a basis for optimism about the years between now and 1976.

South Africa To Remain World's Chief Executioner

By GUY LORRAINE, from Cape Town

South Africa's unenviable reputation as the world's chief executioner is not likely to alter. Prime Minnister John Vorster has re-affirmed that his government has no intention of abolishing the death penalty.

He recently told a political meeting that the South African legal system, which provides for the death penalty in cases of murder, treason, rape, and several other crimes, has been proved successful. "I see no reason for changing it," the prime minister said. His blunt statement has dashed the hopes of capital-punishment abolitionists, who point out that South Africa is responsible for about 90 per cent of the executions in the non-communist world.

In March of this year, Justice Minister Piet C. Pelser stated in the House of Assembly that a total of 156 people had been executed in South Africa during the past two years.

Dr. Barend van Niekerk, professor of law at the University of Natal, who heads the Society for the Abolition of the Death Penalty, says: "In the past 10 years we executed over 1,000 people — about the same number as the number of the known executions of the rest of the world put together."

Van Niekerk also attacks the racial aspect of executions in South Africa. He has produced court statistics to show, for example, that in the period from 1947 to 1966 more than 120 non-white South Africans were sentenced to death for rape. In the same period, only three white persons were so sentenced.

He says, "In the period 1957 to 1966 about 860 whites were charged with the rape of nonwhite women, and of these 288 were convicted. In the same period, 1,447 nonwhites were charged with the rape of white women and 844 were convicted. It is clear therefore that the death-sentence figures bear no relation to the figures for charges or convictions. This is a discrepancy which requires explanation."

The abolitionists say that a major reason for the high number of executions is the wide range of offences which can incur the death penalty in South Africa.

In a recent statement, Dr. David Welsh, a professor of law at the University of Cape Town, said: "While the rest of the civilized world has steadily decreased the range of offences for which the death penalty can be imposed, South Africa has dramatically gone in the opposite direction.

"The last decade has seen a sudden increase in the number of crimes for which the death penalty may be imposed," he continued. "Since 1958 the courts have been empowered to impose the death penalty for robbery, attempted robbery, housebreaking, and attempted housebreaking with intent to commit an offence where 'aggravating circumstances' are found to be present."

The death penalty also extends to certain political offences under the Sabotage Act and the Terrorism Act.

The government has always defended capital punishment as an essential factor in maintaining maximum law and order in South Africa — and in the interest of national security. It is pointed out that outside pressures on South Africa are growing, and that these are being backed by terrorism and subversion.

The government also argues that a nation which contains a large proportion of semiliterate and underdeveloped peoples, as South Africa does, must expect a greater degree of violent crimes than totally civilized nations, and that the only effective deterrent is the death penalty for murder and other violent crime.

Laws Need 18 Months had no obligation "in a legal sense" to make any financial settlement with them on discharge.

"But I felt the government has some moral obligation in this respect," King said, "and that's what we are currently discussing. I hope to be able to make an announcement of settlement in due course."

King told reporters he has assured the other 25 members of the Mediation Commission staff, including 10 mediation officers, that their employment is secure provided they are prepared to transfer to the provincial labor department.

Meanwhile, the minister said R. A. MacDonald, registrar under the Mediation Commission, will be appointed director of the mediation services branch of the labor department. Greg Bishop, the department's director of research, has been asked to study and report on improvements to research programs previously provided by the commission to labor and management.

King said he still hopes to appoint a commissian to hold public hearings in the near future to obtain views from labor and management groups as well as from individuals on how to create a better labor-management climate in B.C.

This will be done "as soon as possible," the minister said, but first a commission must be appointed which has sufficient stature to command the respect of all who appear before it to give their views.

"We want this kind of input before restructuring in a major way the province's labor laws," King said. "So I would say we are looking at 18 months and possibly two years to hold hearings throughout the province and look at the results adequately before putting them into law."

The minister said one area of research he is anxious to get the labor department into is a sociological assessment of questions like "job satisfaction". He added alienation of workers not only from industry but their own labor unions is "one of the main reasons" for a lot of labor disputes in B.C. "We are dealing with the results but giving very little attention to the causes of this worker alienation."

Farmers have found soothing music piped into dairy barns encourages cows to give more milk, King said. Yet he finds it "ironic" so little effort has been spared to find out what is necessary to make workers happy. He added: "The labor department research branch should use some of its resources to try and get at the root cause of worker alienation.

The NDP government acted on one of its major campaign promises during the special October session when it repealed sections of the Mediation Act eliminating compulsory powers for ending labor disputes and abolishing the commission. The name of the act was changed to Mediation Services.

The new act, which comes into effect Nov. 24, also gives wide powers to the minister to enter premises and seize documents and release and withhold information. And it allows the minister to appoint an industrial inquiry commissioner on an ad hoc basis to recommend settlement of a labor dispute.

King rejected suggestions that the legislation gives him "police state powers" arguing that it contains nothing which wasn't present in legislation before the Mediation Commission Act was approved in 1968. He added the appointment of an industrial inquiry commissioner, in his view, would only be justified in "rather severe circumstances" but claimed this provision gives much needed flexibility too the law until it is completely rewritten.

Talks Key to Ceasefire?

war waged a battle of supplies, reinforcing their own stocks and attacking those of the other side, in an all-out race to beat a promised cease-fire agreement.

U.S. planes conducted one of the biggest airlifts to South Vietnam in years while B52s bombed North Vientnamese reinforcements and supplies in some of the most concentrated aerial attacks of the war, according to the U.S. command.

In th the 24-hour period ending Thursday, the Stratofortresses ran five three-plane missions against "supply caches" in the so-called demilitarized zone between the two Vietnams and staged 16 raids in uppper Quang Tri Province where the North Vietnamese are still in control, the U.S. command said.

President Nixon's landslide re-election will bring a significant shift to the antiwar movement and return demonstrators to the streets, leaders of the peace movement said in Washington Thursday.

Spokesmen for the National Peace Action Coalition, the Student Mobilization Committee and Women's Strike for Peace announced plans for antiwar demonstrations in 19 cities on Nov. 18.

decessors since 1947. One marine branch, belongs to the marine brach, belongs to the federation. The branch, which covers ferry workers, has enjoyed a form of contract bargaining, something not open to the rest of the union. This came about after a ferry strike of 1968.

The BCGEU had failed in all-out campaign headed by Fryer to win collective bargaining rights from the recently defeated Social Credit government. The NDP government of Premier Dave Barrett, elected Aug. 30, has promised bargaining rights to the provincial employees. Hearings are being conducted by a special committee to iron out comlex jurisdictional matters and other issues so that a system of collective bargaining can be put into effect.

In his address, Fryer said: "Hand in hand with collective bargaining must go full participation in the trade labor movement."

He said the union owed "certain debts" to the federation.

"Sometimes our members forget that if it hadn't been for the federation, and some others, there wouldn't be a government today willing to give us collective bargaining," he said.

Can you spot it?

LOOK CLOSE. Without one jot of styling trickery, the Mercedes 250 has evolved into the Mercedes 280. Listen carefully. Purring under the hood, the new twin overhead cam 2.8 litre engine. One of the more ingenious pieces of engine design in recent years.

"Turbine-like smoothness" reports one respected British journalist.

Now that most car makers have finished trumpeting about model changes, Mercedes-Benz choose to announce its model improvements. At Mercedes-Benz the engineers call the shots.

A smoother engine

You could mistake the new 280 engine for a high-performance sports car engine: hemi-head combustion chambers, 2-stage dual compound carbs, light-alloy pistons and head, gas-flowed ports and a redline at 6,500 rpm. The crankshaft has seven main bearings.

Yet this is no gas-guzzling knuckle-whitening engine: it winds out smoothly and quietly, with the controlled power you'd expect of a luxury sedan. And it is soft on gasoline.

But, if tempted, you could hold your own with many a so-called sports car. Remember, when Mercedes-Benz engineers went racing, they came home with all the prizes.

3 feet less to park

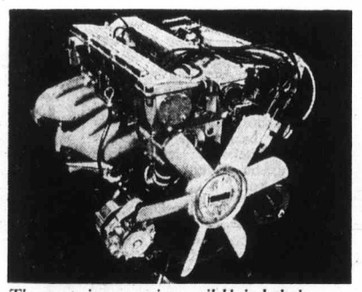
Passenger and trunk space compare favourably. Front seat legroom is greater. Moral: Bigger isn't always better.

You can turn as tightly as a little VW bug. It parks on the proverbial dime. In sluggish city traffic it moves quickly and surely.

Every Mercedes-Benz is based on ten decades of engineering achievements; beginning with Karl Benz' Patent Motor Wagon, the world's first motor car.



The new twin-cam engine: available in both the 280 coupe and the 280 sedan.

It goes where you point it

Domestic sedans can act up. You find yourself gripping the wheel tighter in corners, backing off the gas. At times it feels as if the car is driving you. Plainly, this makes no sense.

Mercedes-Benz engineers have built each 280 coupe and sedan to go where it's pointed. Big sticky radial tires on six-inch rims nail you to the road. Front and rear anti-sway bars prevent that wallowing motion common to luxury sedans. Independent suspension on all four wheels let you take the most frightening curves and bumps in your stride.

You can feel the road again. And you are in control again. Big caliper disc brakes are mounted on all four wheels—not simply the front wheels. Incidentally, no domestic sedan offers all round disc brakes, even as an option. Perhaps surprising, when you consider that disc brakes have long been accepted as superior.

Will it ever rattle?

Bolting the car body to a heavy frame costs less and allows car makers to make annual changes more easily.

Mercedes-Benz engineers point out that bolts tug loose and rattle. Instead of bolts, your Mercedes-Benz body is an all-welded steel structure. So strong, a separate frame is made redundant.

Precious weight is saved. Enormous strength is built-in. There are no bolts to tug loose.

Run a finger over the finish of your 280. You can feel why it took several hours to paint, bake and polish to that high gloss. Numerous outer body seams were filled and buffed by hand before painting.

When you buy an expensive car, you deserve such fastidious touches.

Summing up: what you are buying

This new 280 is most plainly not thousands of dollars worth of styling or bigness. It is a precision machine, built by some of the world's best engineers to outlive trends.

If you are the kind of man who expects excellence in everything you do and in everything you own, we respectfully submit that you will appreciate a test-drive in the new 280.

For information contact your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer today, or write: Mercedes-Benz of Canada Ltd., 849 Eglinton Ave. E., Toronto 17, Ont. And enquire about our European Delivery Plan.

Street Noise Mounts

Urban Ears in Peril

An American scientist recently predicted that two persons won't be able to converse in normal tones on urban streets by 1985 unless noise levels are checked.

They'll have to scream at one another if they are more than three feet apart," he said.

Noise is more than a nuisance—it can be a definite health hazard, say the experts. The message is getting across and cities such as Edmonton and Ottawa have passed stringent anti-noise bylaws.

In combatting noise one of the first steps is to find out where it is coming from and how intense it is. A busload of scientific equipment that can answer these questions is currently travelling across Canada.

The mobile laboratory will visit Victoria, Nov. 16 and 17 and demonstrations will be given to scientists and technicians involved in noise and vibration work.

Nov. 16 it will be at dockyards and Nov. 17 it will visit the University of Victoria. The bus is sponsored by a Danish-based firm and has toured much of Europe.

The equipment includes a variety of precision measurement instruments ranging from hand-held sound level meters used to check traffic and other city noises, to computerized systems used to detect and eliminate noise in industrial production processes.

Mill Cleared

GRAND FORKS (CP) — Provincial Court Judge O. B. Larsen dismissed a charge under Grand Forks' anti-noise bylaw brought against Boundary Forest Products. Judge Larsen ruled the crown had failed to prove that noise from the company's mill had disturbed the peace.

Prejudice Contended

Trafficker Given 15 Months

Police use of undercover agents in arresting drug traffickers may not be a defence to charges arising out of their operation, but it does result in prejudice to the accused and should be a factor in sentencing, it was argued in Victoria Provincial Court Thursday.

Making the point was lawyer David Lisson, counsel for John George Sinker, 22, of 1736 Bay, who was to be sentenced on a charge of trafficking in hashish July 5 in Victoria.

But, replied prosecutor Michael Hutchison, what that view doesn't take into account is "the prejudice to the community" which comes from having those who will sell drugs on the street.

Judge William Ostler didn't say which view he agreed with but sentenced Sinker to 15 months in jail on the charge.

Lisson mentioned two specific ways in which he felt the use of undercover agents prejudiced the accused in drug cases.

For one thing, he argued, the delay between the time the offence is committed and the time the person is arrested when the agent surfaces can work against the accused in finding witnesses or an alibi.

During that delay, too, he said, the person may attempt to rehabilitate himself and may no longer be involved with drugs, but may still be charged and sentenced for offences which occurred months before.

In Sinker's case, there was "some evidence of rehabilitation," Lisson said, in that he had fallen in love with a girl whom he planned to marry, had been trying to obtain work, and had apparently given up selling drugs.

The amount involved had been small, only one gram, he said, and there was no evidence Sinker had been heavily involved in trafficking.

Hutchison replied that the amount involved in every street sale was small, "but it pyramids up from there" with amounts growing larger and larger until the big wholesalers are reached.

However, "it takes two to tango and it takes two to make a sale," Hutchison said, noting that the gram of hashish which Sinker sold to the undercover agent was not an isolatel incident of drug involvement.

He urged that the prejudice to the community caused by the drug-seller be taken into account in sentencing as well as the rehabilitation of the accused.

Sinker had pleaded guilty to the charge Oct. 26. He was the fifth person to be sentenced in Victoria Provincial Court on charges arising from the last undercover operation Oct. 13.

Sentences have ranged from six months to six years.

Sure you can please all of the people all of the time.

Wage, Price Limits Out in Open Now

U.S. Controls Model for Canada?

By IRVING WHYNOT
CP Business Editor

CP Business Editor — agate

One subject likely to come to the fore again following the close federal election is the prospect of wage and price controls in Canada.

Some businessmen were saying privately before the vote that they expected some form of controls following the election, regardless of which party won.

Their basic reasoning was that some means to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment would have to be found and likely would be inflationary in nature. But no government would want to create a new bout of inflation — so controls would be applied to contain it.

A further feeling was that Canada could not continue too long on a course opposite to that in the United States, where a form of controls has been in effect for some time.

Neither Prime Minister Trudeau nor Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield have ruled out the possibility of future controls. And Trudeau in his recent news conference saying he would stay on as prime minister, said economic stimulation would have to be achieved without galloping inflation.

A number of business leaders and economists have already been talking about the prospect of controls.

J. W. Popkin, senior economist of Sun Life Assurance Co., says he expects price and wage controls if inflation increases beyond 5.5 per cent in 1973.

"The relatively good U.S. experience with price control has given some credibility to this approach."

Rodney Kerr of the investment firm of Wood Gundy Ltd. sees the prosect of controls as unsettling for investors.

"It may be that Canada is a lot closer to wage and price controls than we were at this time last week," he said two days after the election. "The possibility of wage and price controls, I believe, will make it very nerve-wracking for investors with large cash reserves to stay out of the bond market."

Jack McKenzie, vice-president finance for Canada Permanent Trust Co., also saw the prospect of controlls.

"Even if no direct controls are placed on interest rates — they wouldn't work anyway — the bond market would have to accommodate to new conditions."

Some others see problems in imposing controls, and some are against them.

Alan Hockin, deputy chief general manager of Toronto Dominion Bank, said in late September that direct government intervention to control prices "would be unsuccessful if it were not accompanied by measures affecting levels of incomes."

"Therefore, I am driven back to the alternative of the use of monetary and fiscal policy, including income redistributive policies, as instruments necessary to achieve this income effect."

Economist Carl Beigie, executive director of the Private Planning Association of Canada, said just a few days before the election that prices must be considered as part of any policy on employment.

"If the only two policy alternatives for dealing with the inflation problem were deflated or price and wage controls is some form, I would reluctantly but firmly support controls.

"In terms of the current situation, however, I think there is a third alternative — namely, to wait it out.

"While I am fully aware of the very serious problems that would accompany any wage and price controls in Canada, we are entering a period where pressures to adopt them may be compelling, and when the conditions necessary for them to be at all useful may exist."

Macdonald Won't Act Re Dohm

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said here Thursday he won't intervene in the dispute with the board of governors of Vancouver Stock Exchange which resulted in the resignation Wednesday of former judge Thomas Dohm as president of the exchange.

Macdonald said: "It was a most unfortunate blowup. Thomas Dohm will be hard to replace because people of his stature and integrity are hard to come by. I hope he'll find some other area of public service in this province."

Dohm resigned after the governors said they felt there was a conflict of interest between his duties as professional head of the Vancouver exchange and his acceptance of a directorship with the Bank of British Columbia.

Asking Ottawa No Simple Task

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

One can't help but wonder about a draft resolution that has gone for study to local municipal councils this week. The paper says in effect, hey, let's ask Ottawa for some money and breathe some life into secondary industry.

There's no doubt that something should be done, if for no other reason than to spread some of the tax load around. There's also evidence that keeping secondary industry thriving here is a losing battle. About once a month some firm or other either folds or is sold to a mainland company, which then seems to have the effect of shortening its life expectancy.

Who knows, the political climate now in Ottawa might be ripe for the asking of such goodies. But the way that the Department of Regional Economic Expansion (DREE) was kicked around in the 28th Parliament, the whole concept of such forms of aid must be in doubt.

In a nutshell, the federal government in 1969 began a regional incentives program to help create jobs. Under this scheme, money is given to businesses to encourage the building of new plants or expand existing ones, so long as new jobs are created.

Ottawa pays up to 25 per cent of the capital cost, plus $5,000 for each new job created, in the case of new plants. Under expansion schemes, the same $5,000 is paid per job but capital cost aid is limited to 20 per cent.

There are three main criteria that must be met:

- The area applying for aid must have a high unemployment rate.
- The area must have a slow economic growth.
- The area must be able to demonstrate an ability to respond to such a financial stimulus.

One or two out of the above three is not enough. It must be three out of three.

Those three reasons are perhaps the main ones that more of B.C. isn't currently designated under the DREE plan. It's limited to the Kootenays and the designation last summer was extended to the end of 1973.

Other areas of the province have tried and failed in their applications. These areas have been getting active assistance in their well-prepared presentations from the provincial department of industrial development, trade and commerce, and are still not making the grade.

The provincial department just next week opens an office in Trail under new appointee John Stanger to help co-ordinate assistance efforts among applying companies and the provincial and federal departments.

Mayor Peter Pollen of Victoria, who proposed the draft resolution was quoted the other day that the regional economic expansion department has an "inactive, but well-equipped office in the Victoria area."

A department spokesman agreed Thursday that the office was "inactive" with respect to Victoria but pointed out that it has administered $3.7 million in federal funds to 31 enterprises in the Kootenays since 1969. These firms have created a total of 1,152 positions.

The federal department also administers the Agricultural and Rural Development Act (ARDA) and, since 1962, has spent $9.1 million in this province.

Sort of makes one wonder what an "active" office would be doing with our tax money.

Two Grants Cancelled

OTTAWA (CP) — Two grants from the regional expansion department to Silver Shields Mines Inc. and the Jacques Cartier Mint Inc. of Toronto have been cancelled, it was announced Wednesday.

The grants, totalling $736,000, were originally announced last May in support of proposals for a silver refining plant and a commercial mine to be located in Cobalt, Ont.

The department said in a news release that an investigation into the incentives produced evidence that a member of the department had received "improper benefits" from a person or persons associated with the company, and the grants were cancelled.

The person involved is no longer with the department, and the results of the investigation have been brought to the attention of the justice department, the statement said.

Wheat Deal Not So Big

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Canadian government is scheduled to announce a major wheat sale to China today, but officials said it would be considerably less than a reported 95 million bushels.

Dow Jones reported Thursday the Canadian government would announce Friday the sale of 95 milion bushels of wheat to China.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said the report was not correct. Lang did not disclose the size of the sale.

Rights Bid Ended

A Victoria man has given up his bid to become a male student nurse at Royal Jubilee Hospital and will instead apply for the course at Victoria General Hospital.

Stephen Makuch, 20, of 1117 Caledonia, said Thursday he has withdrawn his complaint under the Human Rights Act against Royal Jubilee Hospital laid last month after he was told the hospital can not accept males for nursing training.

Makuch, a child care aide at Glendale Hospital, had been told the hospital has no residence accommodation or toilet facilities for male student nurses. The complaint was laid under a section of the act which prohibits an employer discriminating against any person because of their sex.

But another part of the act excludes corporations such as hospitals which are not operated for profit. Royal Jubilee Hospital officials also pointed out there are other training locations, such as Victoria General Hospital, able to accept suitable male candidates.

Window Vandalism Costly

Thousands of dollars worth of plate glass windows were damaged at 14 business premises in Victoria late Wednesday night and early Thursday when someone went on a vandalism spree with a pellet gun.

At most of the premises, scattered throughout the city, more than one plate glass window was damaged. At The Bay, 1701 Douglas, three windows worth a total of $900 were found with pellet holes in them Thursday morning.

Police officials said the holes were thought to have been made by shots from a firearm but investigation showed them to have been made by pellet gun.

Reports had been coming in throughout Thursday because in many cases the damage was not spotted due to the small size of the holes, police said Thursday night.

There seemed to be no pattern to the vandalism. Businesses shot at ranged from Rietman's women's wear, 3175 Douglas, to Cowichan Trading Co. Ltd., 1328 Government.

Police said no arrests had been made but their investigation is continuing.

Thursday night Oak Bay and Esquimalt police reported that a pellet gun was used to damage windows of a dress shop and a number of houses. Some of the residents were home at the time but no injuries were reported.

And Victoria police later Thursday night said they received two more reports of damage to windows — one at a house in the Fairfield area and the other involving car windshields in a parking lot on Esquimalt Road.

Moon Evolution Theory Spurred by Collision

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — In an extraordinary stroke of luck, a large meteoroid smashed into the moon's far side and set off vibrations that suggested for the first time a still-molten lunar core, a scientist reported Thursday.

Dr. Gary Latham, Apollo project chief seismologist, said the data is only preliminary and still fragmentary. But, he said, it could result in understanding the moon's evolution.

"It's certainly very suggestive of a presently molten core," Latham said. "I hope we'll be able to confirm or reject this core hypothesis in a month or so."

Latham made the disclosure in an interview at his office at University of Texas' marine biomedical institute. He recently left Columbia University to join the institute's new division of earth and planetary science.

A hot, liquid lunar core would tie in with other data accumulated by the soon-to-end moon landing project.

The impact was recorded July 17 by all four seismometers placed on the moon by Apollo astronauts. Because of a delay in examining recorded telemetry reports from the instruments, Latham said the impact was only discovered last week.

"That's the thing that has been the subject of our prayers for years," Latham said. "Now we have seismic waves that come right through the middle of the moon.

"As far as the structure of the moon is concerned, this is going to be perhaps the most important event that we record. I know it's the most important to date."

Divers Searching for Bodies

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (UPI) — Divers, groping through silt and buffeted by treacherous tides, Thursday searched for at least a half dozen vehicles that plunged into the Brunswick River with their screaming occupants when a ship slammed into a drawbridge.

Five bodies have been recovered from the wreckage and at least six other persons are missing and presumed dead.

Searchers have spotted oil slicks rising from the sunken vehicles, but divers have been unable to reach them because of the tons of shattered concrete and twisted steel that rained into the river with the trapped vehicles.

"We haven't been able to determine the exact number of vehicles on the span," said Cloyd Hall, a special assistant to Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter. "It could be a minimum of six or seven, or as many as 12 or 15."

Hall said that because of the heavy silt content of the water and the tidal currents, divers have been unable to determine exactly what is on the bottom.

"They (the divers) are working with only about six inches visibility," Hall said. "The current is such that the debris is shifting and it's very dangerous to put divers in there."

Bavarian Look For Kimberley

KIMBERLEY (CP) — Any lost Bavarians will soon feel right at home if they wander through this southeastern B.C. town.

In an effort to combat a declining population and plummeting property values, city council is going to give the town a "Bavarian alpine look" to earn a share of Canada's tourist trade.

Germanys Backed for UN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Big Four announced Thursday they will support the applications for United Nations membership of both East and West Germany, while maintaining their rights and responsibilities in the divided country.

The agreement was reached Nov. 5, after two weeks of talks in Berlin, by the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

Senior U.S. officials said the four-power declaration does not represent United States' recognition of East Germany. They said it is "premature" to speak about recognition now.

In Bonn, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt said the treaty of reconcilation between his country and East Germany marks a turning point in postwar history, ending a major phase of the cold war.

Land Uses Under Study

Capital Regional Board will hold a special all-day meeting Nov. 30 to discuss a report on alternative land uses in the Capital Region.

The report was prepared by the regional board's planning committee under the chairmanship of Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

It lists several planning alternatives, including the creation of two satellite towns, one in Colwood, the other in Central Saanich.

Although the report said that the alternatives were proposed for discussion purposes only, Central Saanich has already registered strong protest against any plans for a satellite town in that municipality.

Try our hot water heater for three months–free. We think it's that hot.

WHAT'S SO HOT?
The recovery rate. You get lots of hot water (75 gallons an hour) when you need it. And that's what a hot water heater is for, isn't it? To prove our point, we'll provide you with one rent-free for three months.

YES, IT'S BRAND NEW.
With a ten year tank warranty. It's compact, rust-proof, fully insulated and glass-lined. Installation of up to $80 is free too, whether you keep the heater or not.

WHY THIS OFFER?
Frankly, we want your business. And letting you try a water heater gives us a chance to prove we're better. There are no catches, just two conditions. Understandably, you must already have an oil-fired furnace, and, if you agree to try a water heater you contract to buy top quality Chevron Heating Fuel.

WHAT DO I DO TO KEEP IT?
Just tell us after the three months and you can arrange to lease or buy. Leasing works out as little as $4.13 a month. Or you can buy it over a period of ten years. But first, get one for your free trial.

Call your nearest Chevron Housewarmer for further details today, and get your family into lots of hot water.
(This offer expires December 31, 1972).

Order of Nature Imperfect: Expert

CALGARY (CP) — The North American ecology movement has erred in placing great emphasis on all things natural, Dr. Rene Dubos, a Pulitzer Prize-winning biologist, said Wednesday.

Man's history is based on changing the natural environment, he said.

The dense forests that covered the earth were usually shunned and in many eras man deliberately destroyed them.

North American Indians burned the forests — which was a boon to current agricultural methods — and the monks of Britain, Scotland and France saw themselves as "partners with God in completing his creation" When they did the same in the 12th century.

Dubos, Professor Emeritus at Rockefeller University in New York, characterized the ecology movement attitudes as:

"The earth was very much better before man appeared and would be better off it man disappeared from it."

He told an audience of 700 that although mismanagement of agriculture and industry has produced ecological disasters, nature is far from perfect.

One area needing improvement is population control. Nature allows species such as lemmings and muskrats to multiply, then destroys them through disease or mass suicide.

"Admittedly this is a solution, but I doubt if you were a lemming or a muskrat, you would think it a good thing."

Peat, coal and oil are examples of incomplete cycling of materials by nature and man's burning of these fuels completes the cycle.

Prairie Seniors Restless

REGINA (CP) — The Pensioners and Pioneers Organization of Saskatoon has asked Premier Allan Blakeney to increase the basic old age pension to $200 a month or risk losing senior citizens to British Columbia.

In a brief presented to the premier Thursday, the organization said the $200 a month pension offered in B.C. will attract pensioners from Saskatchewan and create a further population drain.

"Society owes a substantial debt to the pensioners because Saskatchewan's senior citizens are the men and women who transformed this Prairie wilderness into one of the major breadbaskets of the world," the brief said.

The brief also asked for more nursing and convalescent homes and a special department of government responsible for senior citizens' affairs.

Pierce Off to Big Start In Playland Bonspiel

Glen Pierce is off to a big start in his try for a third straight victory in the $5,000 Invitational Bonspiel at the Playland Curling Club.

Now playing out of the Vancouver Curling Club, and skipping a new and much younger rink, Pierce started Thursday afternoon with a 6-5 last-rock win over Don Moss of the Victoria Curling Club. It was much easier the second time out, Pierce finding an old rival off form and easing to a 10-4 triumph over New Westminster-veteran Trev Fisher.

That put Pierce within one victory of qualifying for Sunday's eight-rink sudden-death knockout final which will decide the distribution of the prize money. The format for the 32-rink events qualifies the semi-finalists in "A" event and the finalists in "B" and "C" events.

The Pierce-Moss tussle was one of the best of the opening day. After a slow start, the rinks matched shot for shot with scarcely a miss and it seemed that an upset was in the making with Moss taking the lead four times and starting home one up. But he couldn't stop Pierce from scoring two on the last end.

Pierce, who is calling the shots for Bert Gretzinger, Croft Bain and Brian Chadwick, meets Bobby Gallaugher of the Playland club in his quarter-final match.

The younger of the two Gallaughers entered got off shakily in the first draw but recovered to take clubmate Lyle Mickelson, 12-6. It was different the next time, Gallaugher jumping off to a 5-1 lead and holding it safe to defeat Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver, 7-6, in a game not as close as the score indicates.

Also reaching the quarter-finals on the third draw were Gary Leibel of the Victoria Curling Club and Lorne Ovens of Vancouver.

Leibel started with a 9-5 win over clubmate Lyle Gordon, then sneaked past Vancouver's Leo Hebert, 7-6, in a tense extra-ender. Ovens defeated Harvey Thomson of Esquimalt and John Hartt of Port Alberni.

Leibel meets Ovens and Pierce gets Bobby Gallaugher in the quarter-finals, which are scheduled for 6:30 tonight.

The last four quarter-final spots were being decided on Thursday's late draw with Keith Dagg of the Victoria Curling Club playing Archie McIntosh of Nanaimo; veteran Gordie Moore of the VCC in against Fred Duncan of Duncan; Kevin Smale of Prince George facing Jack Tucker of Richmond and Larry McLaughlin of Vancouver playing Lyle Garraway of the Victoria Racquet Club.

Four more draws are scheduled today with the first starting at noon Following draws are at 3, 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. The eight finalists will be decided on Saturday, with draws scheduled for 2:15, 6:30 and 9 p.m. The knockout final starts Sunday morning at 9, the semi-finals are at noon and the final is scheduled for 3 p.m.

BEHIND THE GLASS

By JIM TANG

THE SUGGESTION has been made here before, but in the hope that it might bring more than discussion it'll be brought up again. It has to do with the rule — or is it no more than traditional practice? — which forces rinks to play through each event with the same batting order used in the first game.

It's a rule, or accepted practice, which doesn't appear to serve any useful purpose, but there is much that can be said for allowing rinks to change their batting order from game to game if they so wish. There would, of course, be no change in personnel and no switching would be allowed after a game has started. For mixed rinks there would still be the stipulation that male members would throw second and skip rocks.

Lineup switching certainly won't do any harm and it could add considerable interest to bonspiel, and playoff, play.

ADA FULLER and Sadie Campbell, who don't look like chairmen any more than their committee chairmen, have already had a meeting with the committee of 13 they have selected to help them organize and manage the 1974 Canadian women's curling championship.

First major national curling championship to be held in Victoria since 1958, when the Victoria Curling Club hosted the men's playoff, the Lassie Championship will also be staged at Memorial Arena. It is a joint effort by the four Victoria-area clubs — Victoria, Playland, Esquimalt and the Racquet Club — and each is represented on the main committee.

At the meeting with the co-chairmen and exchanging ideas and getting their preliminary briefing were: Verle McKeown (secretary); Onalee Carruthers (accommodation); Sheilah Manifold (ceremonial); Joyce Perry (decorations); Betty Chalmers (finance); Donna Lewis (hospitality); Joan Fitzsimmons (ice and draw); Nancy Baker (official dress); Lee Jameson (promotion); Meryle Hays (publicity); Edith Leach (social); Helen Edwards (tickets); Evelyn Dickson (transportation).

THERE IS still time to enter the 12th annual Totem Bonspiel, but haste is suggested. Not only is the entry deadline next Wednesday but more than 100 of the 128 openings have been taken.

This year's event starts on Wednesday evening, Nov. 29, and ends the following Sunday with semi-finals and finals timed so that it will be possible for curlers to watch the Grey Cup game on television. As has been the case in recent years, there will be six events set up for a Chisholm draw and the value of prizes in each event will be the same. Host club this time is the North Shore Winter Club, where all final draws will be played. Games will also be played at Hollyburn Country Club, Capilano Winter Club, North Vancouver Recreation Centre and, for the first two days, at the Vancouver Curling Club.

There were 12 U.S. rinks — three from Los Angeles, two from Portland and seven from the Seattle area—and three Alberta combinations among the first 100 entries received. Entered from Vancouver Island are Darrall Collins, Lloyd Kearns and Don Matheson of the Victoria Racquet Club, Lyle Mickelson of Playland, Glen Harper of Duncan, Ralph Boyd and Jack Ross of Campbell River, Ken Donison of Port Alberni and Charlie Lyons, George Willgress and Doug Sutherland of Nanaimo.

EXTRA END: Bill Purdy, who looked just as busy as he looked before he retired, came out of curling retirement the other day to play in the club draws at the Victoria club . . . and Jack Truman decided not to stay inactive for the season and returned to action to play with Leo Hebert in the invitational bonspiel now being run off at Playland . . . there's word that the sliding rule will be strictly enforced in the 1973 Canadian men's final, and the long sliders who feel they have a chance to get into the Brier playdown might be well advised to start now in breaking any bad habits. It's surprising sometimes, just how many slide-rule violations there are when the better curlers get together . . . now a Kelowna resident, Lyall Dagg may be missing from provincial playdowns this season. Reports say the former world champion hasn't been curling on a regular basis so far this season, but there is still to get the itch and try the cure . . . at least two of the Giles brothers, Brent and Brad, will be back to defend the Totem Bonspiel championship but Brock was listed as a doubtful starter . . . the Pacific Coast Curling Association had almost 11,000 members last season and expects another increase this season with the affiliation of the Port Alice and CFB Holberg clubs . . . the Playland women's bonspiel, Nov. 23-26, has its full quota of 48 rinks . . . members of Toronto's Granite Curling Club must have some of the most posh surroundings in the game. The club recently moved into a new $9 million complex which includes 10 sheets of ice . . . a sellout for the world curling championship, which is in Regina March 19-24, seems assured. Ticket sale is by mail only, the weekly pass costs $25 and all of the 4600 seats in Regina Exhibition Stadium will be reserved. It will be a 10-nation affair and anyone planning to go should send ticket orders to Silver Broom 73, Box 1973, Regina.

Colonist Cup Final Tonight

Belmont High School is hoping to have its name inscribed on the Colonist Cup for the first time after tonight's match at Royal Athletic Park.

Belmont meets Oak Bay, champions of the Victoria Senior High School Soccer League, for the playoff title starting at 8 p.m. Belmont clinched the final berth in its last league match by trouncing Esquimalt, 10-1, running a win streak to four games. Oak Bay, after its seventh Colonist Cup and first since 1965, nailed down the league title Oct. 27 with a 2-0 victory over Victoria Tyees, the reigning B.C. high school champions.

Both of tonight's combatants will be in the provincial tournament in Victoria from Nov. 16 to 18.

Next games: Tonight — Vancouver at Regina, Brandon at Saskatoon.

The potent attack which buried Winnipeg Jets in recent back-to-back games didn't materialize and the hometown Bruins had little difficulty in posting a 4-2 victory.

The win kept New Westminster in a second-place tie with Medicine Hat Tigers in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Cougars, suffering their eighth lost in 12 starts remain in the Western Division basement, three points behind Vancouver Nats.

Medicine Hat snapped a losing streak at four games Thursday by whipping the visiting Jets, 8-2, while Edmonton Oil Kings rallied for a 5-4 win over the Wheat Kings in Brandon.

Vic Mercredi opened the scoring for Bruins with a power-play goal early in the game and later in the first period, Ron Kennedy made it 2-0 with a goal scored while Cougars held a man advantage.

Bruins took eight of 15 penalties but Cougars could not mount an effective attack against the hard-checking New Westminster squad.

Terry Richards in made 23 stops for New Westminster and Sam Clegg blocked 30 in the Victoria net.

Bruins make their first appearance of the season in Victoria on Saturday night for an 8:30 game.

In Brandon, Darcy Rota scored three goals and Fred Comrie added a pair of goals to give Oil Kings, first in the Western Division, the victory.

From CP

Johnny McKenzie has relinquished his job as coach of Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association temporarily.

The former Boston Bruin said Thursday that he had asked Phil Watson, chief scout and personnel director for the club and a former New York Ranger coach, to assume bench duties.

McKenzie said the move was his decision and that Watson would direct the time "as long as he and I feel it is necessary."

"I feel I can best serve Blazers . . . by putting all my efforts on the ice and not carrying the added burden of coaching," McKenzie said.

He has been sidelined by a broken arm suffered Oct. 3 but is ready to return to the lineup.

Watson handled the club for two home games earlier but McKenzie had handled coaching duties on a recent road trip.

The Blazers have only two wins in 13 games and are deep in the East Division cellar, nine points behind fifth-place Ottawa Nationals.

The Nationals suffered their fifth loss Thursday night, a 4-1 home loss to Winnipeg Jets.

Bobby Hull, playing his second game with the Jets, drew one assist as his club pumped in three second-period goals to decide the issue.

The win, before 5044 fans, moved Winnipeg into a three-way tie for the lead in the West Division with Los Angeles Sharks and Alberta Oilers.

Oilers earned their share of the lead with a 7-2 win over the Sharks at Edmonton, where 2800 fans were on hand.

James Bay Athletic Association came up with three goals in four minutes and 15 seconds late in the final period for a victory Thursday night.

JBAA, losers of two one-goal decisions to Stockers earlier this season, scored a come-from-behind, 5-4 win over the North Americans in a Victoria Intermediate League game at G. R. Pearkes Arena.

Kelly Christianson, at 14:29; Barry McLachlan, at 16:01, and Russ Joyal, at 18:46, erased a 4-2 Stockers' lead. McLachlan was brought up from Juan de Fuca Gulls of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" league for the game. Ken Bate and Don Lancaster were the other James Bay scorers. Don Presley, with two goals, Lawrie Huck and Errol Goulden scored for Stockers, who missed a chance to move into a first-place tie with Ingraham.

Cahill Joins Argo Casualty List

TORONTO (AP) — Leo Cahill, a year ago proclaimed Coach of the Year in the Canadian Football League, was fired Thursday as head coach of Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference.

The dismissal came during a 90-minute meeting with owner John Bassett.

"Mr. Bassett feels it would be a happier situation if the Argoes had a new, head coach," Cahill said.

"That was the only reason given. He said it was based on our 3-11 record. If that's all there is to it, he's 100-per-cent wrong."

Said Bassett:

"I simply felt on balance that Argonauts would do better with a new head coach."

Cahill joined the Argos in 1967 and took them to the EFC playoffs that year and every year since with the exception of this year.

"Leo has done a good job with the Argos over the years. That job was recognized with a new contract and a raise in pay," Bassett said.

There still are two years on Cahill's contract — estimated at about $25,000-$30,000 a year. Bassett said the club would honor the remaining part of the pact.

Of this year's 3-11 record, Cahill said:

"It's a deceiving record. We had 13 players injured, including our first-string quarterback. We lost eight games by a total of 36 points."

Bassett did not say who might be sought as a replacement.

Cahill, 44, joined the Argos in 1967, succeeding Bob Shaw who walked out on a three-year contract that still had a year to go. Shaw, who cited "intolerable conditions" on the club, is the only coach in more than 20 years to quit the Argos of his own volition.

Frank Clair, now general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, ruled the Argonauts from 1950 to 1954, winning two Grey Cups before being fired. Bill Swaicki had the job 1955-56, Hamp Pool served 1957-59, the late Steve Owen finished out Pool's third season before he was fired himself.

Lou Agase ran the team 1960-62 and got the Argos into the EFC finals two years in a row and was fired during his third year.

Nobby Wirkowski, former Argo quarterback, was fired after his 1962-64 tenure, when Shaw was hired.

Esposito Snaps Slump To Power Boston Win

Cowichan sports fishermen are getting a rough deal from federal and provincial fisheries officials. Huge net fleets have been working the Cowichan Bay salmon as they enter the Bay and the Indians have been spreading and netting the salmon in the lower reaches of Cowichan River.

But federal fisheries still presists on maintaining the sports fishing boundary across Cowichan Bay and keeps three men patrolling the boundary . . . men who could be far better employed elsewhere.

Now at the request of federal fisheries the provincial fisheries department has agreed to the banning until Nov. 15 of all sports angling in that section of the Cowichan River from the Silver Bridge at the Island Highway, downstream to the Pimbury Bridge, which marks the start of the ridal portion of the river, which has been closed to anglers for some weeks.

That part of the river from the Island Highway to the mouth provides some of the best cutthroat fishing and some brown trout fishing, at this time of year, as the trout follow the salmon upstream.

While sports anglers are squeezed into a narrow area by netters on the outside and Indian fishermen on the upstream side, the sportsmen are only allowed to fish the mid-Cowichan Bay waters. They are forbidden to go where the fish may be taken.

The sports fishermen have been the leaders in demanding conservation measures. But these measures now seem a little out of line.

Federal fisheries in recent years have been moving rather high-handedly to more and more closures of rivers for long periods.

Fishing for salmon in rivers is a controversy in itself . . . and we ride the fence on that one. There is no doubt too many "sports" anglers abuse this type of fishing by resorting to illegal jigging rather than to angling for the coho and chinook salmon which they are allowed to take when a river is open. All too often they also jig the pinks and chum salmon which they are not allowed to take.

The numbers they take is undoubtedly only a drop in the bucket conservation-wise, but emotionally it is sickening to true sportsmen to see jiggers taking the salmon they prize so highly.

As to catching the salmon in a river, it really depends as to whether you are primarily a saltwater angler or a freshwater angler. Saltwater anglers feel the salmon has got by commercial and sports fishermen and should be allowed to continue unmolester to the spawning beds.

Certainly to catch a salmon in a river on light tackle is fine sport, even though it is distasteful to saltwater anglers. The numbers of salmon taken by sporting tackle in rivers is not significant, but the jiggers who skirt legal technicalities pose another problem.

Maybe there is a case to close rivers to salmon anglers during the height of spawning runs. We can go along with that in some cases.

We have stood on the banks of the Sooke River with Fisheries Guardian Jack Brooks and watched a "steelhead" angler dragging triple hooks across the salmon spawning beds.

That man . . . and more like him . . . is the reason the Sooke is closed to all angling during salmon spawning runs. The Sooke holds a good run of fall cutthroat trout.

But the provincial fisheries department should have more backbone and stand up to the federal fisheries department.

A good case can be made for fly fishing only in these stretches of spawning rivers which are being closed to all angling at this time of year.

Sports anglers shouldn't be deprived of their trout fishing in the best stretches of rivers at the most productive time of year. It is a cinch that fly fishermen can't drag a heavily weighted jig across a river bottom and catch a salmon.

If they can take a salmon on the fly, more power to them. It would be a good way to encourage more quality fly fishermen without depriving any less experienced anglers of their sport.

Chinook fishing continues good in Oak Bay waters, fair in Victoria waters with anglers still catching some by casting from the Breakwater and Ogden Point docks, as the bait hugs the shorelines. Sooke waters have slowed down, but some chinooks and coho are still being taken. Saanich Inlet is mainly a grilse fishery now, but Gordon Lamont picked up three chinooks in Finlayson Arm Tuesday.

This is the last weekend for fishing upper reaches of the Cowichan River, but drift fishers with salmon egg flies have been having good success for cutthroats. Bear Lake extension of Cowichan and Somenos and Quamichan Lakes have been good with spinners and Flatfish. Middle reaches of Cowichan have been producing jacks for anglers using Metric and Mepps spinners.

Phil Esposito burst out of an early-season scoring slump Thursday night and moved into contention in the National Hockey League scoring derby.

Esposito, the defending points champion, scored two goals and assisted on three others to boost Boston Bruins to an easy 8-3 win over the visiting Detroit Red Wings.

The five points moved Esposito, who has had a slow start after starring in the Team Canada-Russia series in September, from 18th place in total points to a tie for fourth spot.

The big centre opened and closed a three-goal outburst in the game's first five minutes, sandwiching goals around Mike Walton's first of two scoring shots.

Esposito helped set up Johnny Bucyk's eighth goal of the season and 1000th career point, midway through the second period and capped the evening with assists on two goals by Wayne Cashman.

Bucyk, who also earned an assist, moved into second place in the scoring race, one point behind Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres.

Esposito, Chicago's Stan Mikita and two Los Angeles Kings, Ralph Backstrom and Butch Goring, are next with 22 points each.

Perreault was kept off the scoresheet Thursday when Sabres and California Golden Seals fought to a scoreless tie in Buffalo.

In the only other game, Rick MacLeish scored three goals to lead Philadelphia Flyers to a 5-3 win over the visiting Chicago Black Hawks.

Buffalo goalkeeper Roger Crozier blocked 23 shots to register his second shutout of the season while Marv Edwards turned aside 29 Sabre drives for his first shutout of the campaign.

Edwards was particularly sharp in the third period, making 15 stops.

Seals came closest to scoring when Marshall Johnston hit a goal post with a first-period shot.

In Philadelphia, Flyers built a 3-0 lead in the first period and survived a late rally to move into a second-place tie with Chicago.

Offer Carries Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — The World Hockey Association said Thursday it is willing to settle differences with the National Hockey League out of court.

But it warned that if the NHL insists on continuing court action to preserve its controversial reserve clause, the WHA will seek to invaliate all NHL contracts.

WHA president Gary Davidson made the offer and issued the warning at news conference here in wake of an injunction granted by a Philadelphia district judge preventing enforcement of the clause.

The clause, which ties a player to his team for life unless traded, sold or released, has held former NHL players like Bobby Hull from playing in the WHA.

Philadelphia Judge A. Leon Higginbotham issued the injunction on the application of Johnny MacKenzie, who joined Philadelphia Blazers from Boston Bruins. MacKenzie's contract had been sold to the NHL Philadelphia Flyers.

Davidson said the present injunction would probably "go all the way to the Supreme Court."

"We didn't want to go to litigation, we'd rather fight them (NHL) on the ice. It would be to our advantage to drop litigation, win, lose or draw," he said.

Baseball Melon Carved

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland's moustachioed Athletics, including their unlikely hero, Gene Tenace, will receive a record $20,705.01 each for winning baseball's world series.

The losing Cincinnati Reds get $15,080.25 each.

A biggest-ever world series pot of $1,882,178.15 was carved up Thursday by commissioner Bowie Kuhn. The Athletics and Reds bagged most of it, but 10 other major-league teams get smaller shares.

Oakland's total payoff was $677,584.14 for winning the seven-game World Series. It was split into 27 full shares plus lesser amounts for 27 others, including batboys and clubhouse help.

Cincinnati awarded 32 full shares from its $508,188.19 and listed five persons for cash grants.

Detroit Tigers, who dropped the American League final playoffs 3-2 to Oakland, will receive full shares of $6,859.77 for almost making it. Thirty-two persons participated.

National League playoff runner-up Pittsburgh Pirates earned $6,549.55 each in post-season money. The Pirates lost the league championship series 3-2 to the Reds.

Other teams drawing full shares included Houston Astros, $1,290.71; Chicago Cubs, $1,267.70; Boston Red Sox, $1,208.15; Chicago White Sox, $1,208.15; Baltimore Orioles, $330.88; Minnesota Twins, $308.22; Los Angeles Dodgers, $292.15; and New York Mets, $280.09.

Mount Newton Romps to Win

Mount Newton crushed North Saanich, 42-0, Wednesday in a Saanich junior high school rugby league match. Mt. Newton also won the game between the schools' second teams, 33-0, but North Saanich came through, 10-4, in the third-team game.

Plymouth likes you to get off to a good start on those cold winter mornings. So Electronic Ignition comes standard.

For years Chrysler engineers have been researching and perfecting an Electronic Ignition system to replace the conventional breaker points and condenser. Now we have it. And it's standard on all '73 Plymouth engines built in North America. Electronic Ignition is virtually maintenance free. So your engine stays in tune longer and goes further between tune-ups. It also improves cold starts and helps keep your exhaust emissions cleaner.

'73 Plymouth Duster has our space age Electronic Ignition system. And it has torsion bar-suspension for superb handling control and a smooth ride. And, like every Plymouth, Duster is built to last with Unibody construction and a 7-stage dip-and-spray process to fight rust. When it comes to size, Duster is the compact that's just big enough, just small enough, to be just right. There's room to seat five adults in comfort, room for all their luggage too. Yet its 108 inch wheel base is easy to handle and easy to park. Choose the power you need, right up to 340 V8. Plymouth Duster. Too tough to beat. Drive it today at your Plymouth dealers.

Extra care in engineering...it makes the difference.

Waterfront Park Completed

Work on a new small waterfront park at Victoria's Inner Harbor is just about completed and the city is making plans to have Premier Barrett open it officially.

Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday the opening ceremony could be held before Christmas.

The park at the foot of Menzies was built at a cost of $60,000. Funds were provided by the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Where Animals Are Tops

Animal kingdom comes into its own at this time of year, and anyone close to the situation such as Mrs. Linda McCuaig, 3109 Parlow Plice, Colwood, realizes one must keep an eye on them. Weird and wonderful creations at Hillside shopping centre store where Mrs. McCuaig works keep life from getting stuffy.

Lethal Light Poles Scored by Hadfield

This was the warning given this week to a seminar sponsored by Vancouver Island chapter of the Illuminating Engineering Society, by Ray Hadfield, superintendent of the British Columbia motor vehicles branch.

He referred, he told the group in the Queen Victoria Inn, to highway lampposts placed too close to the travelled portion of the road — and especially on the Patricia Bay highway.

In particular he mentioned two lampstands by the new overpass at Quadra and the highway, which were "just waiting for an accident to happen."

Hadfield said properly-designed highway lights could be placed far enough from the road surface to miss being targets for vehicles which might, at high speed, be forced to veer to the right.

The superintendent said both street and car lights were factors in the 300 night-time traffic fatalities (out of 636 in all) in B.C. during 1971.

Of 448,000 vehicles tested last year, he said, 101,500 were rejected because of faulty car lights.

Truck Gear Gone

A variety of mechanical goods worth almost $1,300 were stolen in a break-in at a Victoria truck sales firm overnight Tuesday, police reported Thursday.

Police said entrance to the premises of the firm, Truck Town, at 2525 Bridge, was apparently gained by kicking in the basement door.

The thieves stole a number of batteries, wrenches, cylinders and other tools, including a battery charger worth about $225 and a hydraulic truck jack, weighing more than 700, worth about $275.

Waterfront Park Completed

Work on a new small waterfront park at Victoria's Inner Harbor is just about completed and the city is making plans to have Premier Barrett open it officially.

Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday the opening ceremony could be held before Christmas.

The park at the foot of Menzies was built at a cost of $60,000. Funds were provided by the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Labor Taken To Task On Unequal Pay Deals

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — Labor was accused Wednesday of talking out of both sides of its mouth where equality for male and female workers is concerned.

The report of the women's rights committee, endorsed by delegates to the 17th annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said in part: "For several years delegates to federation conventions have been passing resolutions calling for equal pay for equal work. However, it appears that unions are still negotiating contracts with not only unequal pay rates, but also unequal pay increases.

"This inequality is a perpetual embarrassment when it is pointed out by groups outside the trade union movement since it is virtually impossible to defend such practices."

The report — the work, incidentally, of a 12-member committee that doesn't include one male unionist — said most women workers don't think they need union protection. This doesn't sink in until they are forced through cold, hard economic factors to remain in the market place on a permanent basis.

"These women have for years been brainwashed to believe that they didn't really need or want a union because membership in a trade union would somehow make them unfeminine, or, if they worked in an office, they were told that they were really part of management and their jobs had prestige," the report says.

One of the recommendations made by the committee is that unions study the feasibility of negotiating, as terms of their contracts, the establishment of day-care centres. These would be financed initially by the employer with the assistance of subsidies.

Workers would help support the operation through fees gauged to their ability to pay.

A large part of the report is devoted to the need for child-care centres on a 24-hour a day basis. It says the careers of workers have been badly handicapped by a lack of such centres.

Referring to a survey made, the report says:

"The most shocking revelation was that one-third of those answering indicated that they have at some time or other turned down a promotion, a raise in pay or a better paying job because they were not able to make suitable arrangements for the care of their children."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please settle something that has caused more fights than I care to count? It's about dancing. My wife and I used to enjoy going to dances together but we have given it up because we always end up in a fight. She claims I am out of my mind. I say she is out of hers.

When I dance with a woman I act like she is my sister. When I dance with my wife I act like we are married. I expect her to reserve the close stuff for me. I think it is cheap for a married woman to dance with other men in any of the following ways:

(a) Cheek-to-cheek
(b) Breast-to-chest
(d) Knee-to-knee

I also believe it is up to the woman to set the rules. Most guys will get as close as they can. How about it? — Fighting.

Dear F: Since you obviously consider dancing a vertical expression of a horizontal idea, it's no wonder you and your wife are fighting about it. I see nothing evil about dancing cheek-to-cheek, breast-to-chest or belly-to-belly. That knee-to-knee business, however, is new to me. It must be the neatest trick of the year — and quite a sight. (The things I learn from my readers!)

Dear Ann Landers: The young executive of today is ambitious, ruthless, zealous, charged up and eager for success. He's also in a hurry.

If we older men were as outdated, dim-witted, and short-sighted as he seems to think, there would be no organization for him to walk into. The fact that the business is attractive enough for him to WANT to come into it should mean something.

I have seen young dynamos enter organizations and ignore experienced men whose wisdom and experience could be invaluable. This goes for the young doctor who joins older physicians in an established pratice, the commerce graduate who thinks he's learned everything there is to know, and the law school "genius" who is conversant with what's in the books but has a lot to learn about people.

We older men realize the world has changed, but that some things never change — for example, the net worth of respect for age and experience, compassion, and the ability to listen.—Philosopher.

Dear Phil: There is a great deal to what you say and I thank you for saying it so well. (Are you listening, students?)

Dear Ann Landers: Should a wife give up her seat in the car, next to her husband who is driving, for a woman who is the same age or younger? I wouldn't mind giving up my seat for an older person, or for a guy who might want to talk to my husband about sports or something, even if it meant sitting in the back alone. But what about a wife sitting in the back with one of the children because her girl friend plunked herself in the front?—Sitting Not So Pretty.

Dear Not So: Obviously you considered this an act of aggression. Some women would not have minded but since you did, you should have suggested to your girl friend that she plunk herself in the back.

Dear Ann Landers: Some people don't care what others think, but I am not that thick-skinned. I do care. My husband and I have been married six years. Our daughter is six years old. She was born seven weeks before we were married. We have been very happy although I regret not having married several months earlier.

We have moved to a new neighborhood and when people ask me how long we've been married I find myself adding a year. I know I can't keep this up. When our daughter starts school we can't lie about her age. One day she might ask to see our marriage certificate. What should I do?—Home To Roost.

Dear H: Tell the truth. Make no explanation to the neighbors. If, in a few years, your daughter asks questions, provide her with honest answers.

Silver tureen by John Edwards II of London

Soup's On, Insuperably

BOSTON, Mass. — No other part of the dinner service down through the ages has lent itself so easily to the unusual and bizarre in form and design as the soup tureen.

Although most tureens are stunning additions to the dining table, still others run the gamut from shapes of fish and mermaids, swans and water buffaloes, as well as vegetabels, flowers, fruits, and foliage.

Some, like one in the shape of a huge boar's head, are great collector's items, but are not really very appetizing. Others, although ornate and expensive, are not truly objects of great beauty.

But mostly on the breath-takingly beautiful side are the pieces of the Campbell Museum Collection, the only one in the United States devoted to decorative arts related to the service of soups.

"Throughout the past three centuries, the soup tureen has been the most massive and decorative object for serving food," said William C. Parker, president of the Campbell Museum.

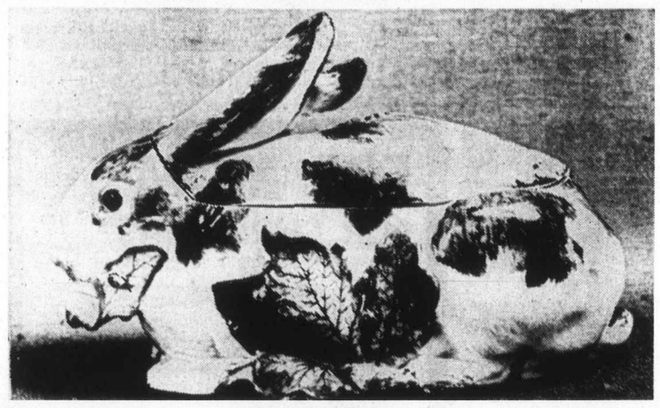
"Tureens made in China and western Europe during the 18th century were especially outstanding, with superb artistry in design and workmanship. This is understandable since formal dining was conducted on a grand scale and with an elegance unmatched in history."

The exhibit, on view at the Boston museum, illustrates the splendid and varied forms of soup tureens in porcelain, faience, silver, pewter, Chinese export porcelain, and some popular forms.

The collection, on loan from the Campbell Museum in Camden, N.J., was started in 1966 by the Campbell Soup company. It includes more than 80 tureens, as well as ladles, soup plates, and bowls.

It is a stunning display, beautifully installed and lighted. There is a porcelain swan tureen from Meissen, a faience rooster from Sceaux, a silver tureen in the shape of a ship that was made for Catherine the Great, and a Portuguese tureen in the shape of a tub of fish.

The first silver tureens came to England from France at the beginning of the 18th century and with them came the style of serving soup from a large soupiere placed on the table or side-board. The French used the word soupiere, but tureen seems to have come from the Latin word "terrinus" which means earthen. It refers to a large covered vessel from which soup is served.



Chelsea rabbit tureen

Originally tureens were accompanied by stands or platters, which often have not survived. Tureen also applies to smaller dishes used for sauces or gravy. Soup tureens were made of Sheffield plate, porcelain, pottery, and pewter, with their shapes varying from round to oval, from simple to elaborate.

Silver tureens in elaborate designs executed in silver and silver gilt were the triumphs of great dinner services on the tables of European royalty and also those of English and early American families. Often four or more tureens accompanied a large service.

The extraordinary gilt-lined silver tureen made for Catherine the Great and shaped like a ship is more of a curiosity than a work of art.

The rarest of all silver is that of France, rare because so much of it went to the melting pots to defray the cost of wars. France produced in silver the most beautiful and sophisticated designs the world has known.

As a result of the loss of many masterpieces to the melting pot in England as well as France, everything was done to make porcelain ornate and valuable and sufficiently beautiful to replace silver.

Porcelain is said to have been the 19th century's status symbol, and competition went to such an extreme that every prince and king had to own his own porcelain factory, not just his own porcelain services. The process of making hard-paste porcelain had been known for centuries in China, but it had been guarded well and anyone who wanted it had to get it the hard way, by slow boat or caravan, from China.

In 1708, when Johann Bottger produced the first true porcelain at Meissen some of the most beautiful and imaginative designs of birds and animals were produced by the gifted modeler Johann Kaendler.

The Chinese export porcelains were in great demand in the western world. They were durable and usually had a coarse surface something like an orange peel. Western designs, including coats of arms and monograms, were sent to China to be copied. These were inexpensive and very popular.

Colored green and yellow glazes, developed by Josiah Wedgwood when he was in partnership with Thomas Whieldon at their pottery in Fenton, Staffordshire, are represented by a cauliflower soup tureen, cream-colored earthernware with a green glaze. Cauliflower is usual in tea and coffee services, but an example in a soup tureen is rare.

The faience, or tin-enameled earthenware, factories played an important part in European ceramic history. They preceded and competed with the porcelain products until both were finally replaced by the cream-colored earthenware of the late 18th century. In Holland, England, Ireland, and Scotland, these tin-enameled wares were called delftware.

Faience on the continent lent itself to a variety of exotic forms, especially animals. One rococo tureen and stand in polychrome colors from Sceaux, France, has a dear finial on the cover combined with boars' heads for handles.

French soft-paste porcelain had its beginning at Rouen in the 17th century, where it was produced in limited quality before German hard-paste porcelain was manufactured at Meissen.

England produced soft-paste porcelains with a beauty and delicacy of their own. Foremost was the Chelsea factory, which held yearly auction sales and published a catalogue listing and describing the lots to be sold. Several of these Chelsea catalogues have survived, making it possible to identify many old, rare pieces. In the catalogues of 1755 and '56, 11 entries for tureens are found and one such entry lists "a fine tureen in the form of a rabbit as big as life and an oval fish."

These tureens were intended for soup and should not be confused with the smaller rabbit dishes referred to as "rabbits for dessert."

In the Campbell collection tureens of the red anchor are two Chelsea rabbit soup period, as well as a hen tureen of the same period, described in the 1756 catalogue as "a beautiful tureen in the shape of a hen and chickens as large as life."

'Look to Your Own Rights, Brothers'

OTTAWA (CP) — It took a woman to tell male delegates to the Ontario Federation of Labor convention Wednesday that they should "stand up for their rights."

Delegates were discussing a resolution urging the Ontario government to raise compensation paid to widows of industrial accident victims to $250 a month from the present $175 a month.

Shirley Carr, a vice-president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said she was opposed to the resolution as it stood. The compensation should be paid to survivors and dependents of all workers killed in industrial accidents — not just to widows.

"What happens if your wife is killed on the job? You have the right to receive benefits as well," she told delegates, the vast majority of whom were men.

"It's time you stood up for your rights, brothers. What do you know about day-care? Where would you put your kids if you lost your wife.

"You can't go out the next day and get yourself a new wife.

"Think about yourselves, my brothers, and don't be led down the garden path."

An amendment was proposed to amend the resolution by putting in the phrase "dependents of workers" instead of widows and the motion referred to the OFL executive for consideration.

Workers Strike Hits Coquitlam

COQUITLAM (CP) — Inside workers for the Municipality of Coquitlam have joined outside workers in a walkout which has paralyzed the municipality's operations. The outside workers walked off the job to protest the firing of storekeeper Armand Lemieux.

Along with new legal rights women are gaining new legal responsibilities as a result of recent changes in divorce and family relations legislation, says lawyer Pam Murray.

Speaking on women and the law at the last in a series of five noon-hour information sessions sponsored by the Victoria Status of Women Action Group, she outlined some of the new laws and their effects to an audience of about 40 women Thursday.

Under the new divorce act, passed in 1967, there are two basic categories of grounds for divorce, the first a no-fault category, the second, a fault category, she explained.

Under the first, divorce can be obtained after separation for three years by mutual consent, and either partner can apply. However, if there is no mutual consent, the person left can file in three years, but the person leaving can file only after five years.

Seldom Used

Other grounds are gross addiction to alcohol or drugs, if there is no hope of rehabilitation. Because of the way these grounds are defined, they're seldom used, said Murray. "It's almost impossible to find a doctor who will admit that anyone is past rehabilitation."

Disappearance for three years, non-consummation of the marriage after one year and imprisonment are also grounds for divorce.

Adultery, rape, homosexuality, cruelty and breakdown of marriage because of certain specified causes are grounds for divorce under the fault category of the act, she said.

One of the changes in the new act is that women have to prove they are entitled to maintenance payments, and such factors as the wife's conduct, her educational skills and any assets she might have are taken into consideration.

"It's not full support," she warned. "She is obliged to find some support for herself."

Tax-Deductable

Payments can be made periodically or in a lump sum. Periodic payments are usually more popular because they

Union of Public Employees, said she was opposed to the resolution as it stood. The compensation should be paid to survivors and dependents of all workers killed in industrial accidents — not just to widows.

"What happens if your wife is killed on the job? You have the right to receive benefits as well," she told delegates, the vast majority of whom were men.

"It's time you stood up for your rights, brothers. What do you know about day-care? Where would you put your kids if you lost your wife.

"You can't go out the next day and get yourself a new wife.

"Think about yourselves, my brothers, and don't be led down the garden path."

An amendment was proposed to amend the resolution by putting in the phrase "dependents of workers" instead of widows and the motion referred to the OFL executive for consideration.

New Rights, New Duties

Women Give and Take Under New Family Laws

By KATHRYN HAZEL
Colonist Reporter

Along with new legal rights women are gaining new legal responsibilities as a result of recent changes in divorce and family relations legislation, says lawyer Pam Murray.

Speaking on women and the law at the last in a series of five noon-hour information sessions sponsored by the Victoria Status of Women Action Group, she outlined some of the new laws and their effects to an audience of about 40 women Thursday.

Under the new divorce act, passed in 1967, there are two basic categories of grounds for divorce, the first a no-fault category, the second, a fault category, she explained.

Under the first, divorce can be obtained after separation for three years by mutual consent, and either partner can apply. However, if there is no mutual consent, the person left can file in three years, but the person leaving can file only after five years.

Seldom Used

Other grounds are gross addiction to alcohol or drugs, if there is no hope of rehabilitation. Because of the way these grounds are defined, they're seldom used, said Murray. "It's almost impossible to find a doctor who will admit that anyone is past rehabilitation."

Disappearance for three years, non-consummation of the marriage after one year and imprisonment are also grounds for divorce.

Adultery, rape, homosexuality, cruelty and breakdown of marriage because of certain specified causes are grounds for divorce under the fault category of the act, she said.

One of the changes in the new act is that women have to prove they are entitled to maintenance payments, and such factors as the wife's conduct, her educational skills and any assets she might have are taken into consideration.

"It's not full support," she warned. "She is obliged to find some support for herself."

Tax-Deductable

Payments can be made periodically or in a lump sum. Periodic payments are usually more popular because they can be deducted from income tax.

Under the newly-passed Family Relations Act a woman can apply for property rights at the same time she applies for child and wife maintenance. This was not possible before, she said. A woman is entitled to some of her husband's property, even if it is in his name.

Another change is that women can now apply for maintenance after being divorced for two years, if they have not applied before. In the past if a woman did not ask for it at the time of divorce she was barred from obtaining it.

Often women would forget to apply for maintenance under emotional stress of divorce proceedings, or would let themselves be persuaded by their husbands not to apply so as to ensure their cooperation.

"This change gets rid of those blackmail techniques," she said.

Pam Murray

May Be Sued

A change that works against some women but means they have more responsibility under the law is that now a woman who has committed adultery can be sued by the man's wife.

"The woman can't get off scot-free if she breaks up a marriage," said Murray. "All these acts are facing the realities of present society."

The practice of the laws were coming more slowly than changes in the law, because "some of the judges can't understand these new practices." However, the situation was gradually changing, she said.

Husbands can now apply for maintenance from the wife, if she is the bread-winner, and there had already been a case in Ontario in which a husband did get maintenance payments in a divorce settlement.

"However, the case in Ontario was an extreme example. The husband had been an invalid for many years and she left without any reason."

Under the old Deserted Wives and Maintenance Act maintenance was cut off if the wife committed adultery, but this, too had been repealed with passage of the new family relations act.

Common-Law

There is also recognition of common-law relationships in the new law. A partner in a common-law relationship can apply for maintenance for children if the couple has been living together for more than two years, and the maintenance can cover the children until they reach six years of age.

Either the man or woman in the relationship can apply for maintenance, and the definition of child in the act covers all catergories, she said.

"Basically it's any child who lives under the same roof. It can get very complicated. There's one case in family court where a child is being supported by three men."

Husbands can be obliged to buy bonds or deposit stocks or other assets to ensure maintenance payments, she added, and the court can also order which partner in a marriage has the exclusive right to live on the premises of the home, whether it is rented or owned.

Murray cautioned against going to court over squabbles about furniture or other not-very-valuable assets. "The trouble with fights over furniture is that it just isn't worth it. Why spend $1,000 to battle over $500 worth of furniture?"

Land Hold

Under the Wives Protection Act a woman can file a document in the land registry office which will prevent her husband from selling any land he owns without consulting her.

Custody cases are now heard in family court, she said, which is a great improvement over past procedure when they were handled by the supreme court, which was expensive. However, a complication in interpretation of the new laws has arisen, with the result that in Victoria custody cases cannot be heard in family court if for some reason maintenance has been disallowed.

In Vancouver judges interpret the act differently, she said, so that such custody cases can be heard in family court.

In a question period after he talk, she advised women doing their own divorces to "make sure if you start a divorce that you finish it and file the judge's order.

"There are a lot of little things you may not have noticed," she said, so it's best to have a preliminary interview with a lawyer before doing your own divorce, in case there are complications.

Costs Differ

Cost of such an interview would only be about $25 to $30, she said, and if you can't afford that, the legal referral service will do it for $5 and the neighborhood legal clinic will do it free.

A woman also has security for legal costs under the divorce act, which means her husband must pay the lawyer's fees if she makes application at the time she files for divorce.

Legal aid in British Columbia is provided free of charge, she said, and is restricted to "more necessary things than divorce," but will handle custody and maintenance cases.

However, the neighborhood legal clinic gives help to women wanting divorces, and the legal aid committee here is thinking of setting up a course in which one lawyer would teach a group of women how to do their own.

Biggest handicap facing the committee is lack of funds, she said. The committee had made application to the federal government for grants but was refused. Until it gets the necessary financial backing, there isn't much more that it can do, she explained.

Wives can now be sued by their husbands for property, but since it's a new law, judges like to have clear cases because they are unfamiliar with it. In the past women could not be sued, she said, and "so women have always had more rights in this particular field. Now the situation is more equalized, by the woman giving up rights rather than getting rights."

Top Students Gain Awards

Three University of Victoria president's scholarships were awarded at the Oak Bay high school assembly Wednesday.

In other presentations, Ivor McMahon won the Chris Spencer scholarship of $500; Dan Barer the special university entrance scholarship of $250; Jocelyn Abbott the Harbord Insurance scholarship of $500; Bruce Knapp the Warner-Lambert scholarship of $750 a year for four years and Sandra Pumfrey won the B.C. Forest Products scholarship of $400.

Seven graduating students had grade averages of 90 per cent or higher, 22 had between 80 and 90 per cent, 11 between 74 and 79.5 per cent, and five between 70 and 73.5 per cent. A total of 45 students received scholarship or bursary awards.

Woman Quits Bench For Married Life

Vancouver Island has lost its first and only woman provincial judge to marriage.

Mrs. Myrtle Saxton of Ucluelet, who made Vancouver Island legal history in 1970 when she was officially proclaimed a provincial judge, is now Mrs. Robert Thompson of Campbell River. Her husband is a contractor, president of Georgian Bay Construction.

In a phone interview Friday Mrs. Thompson said she could have continued as a relief judge for outlying areas around Campbell River but that this would have conflicted with her home life.

Hugo Peterson, mayor of Tofino, is currently summary convictions judge for Ucluelet and Tofino.

Ontario-born and a Vancouver Islander for 20 years, Mrs. Thompson was well known in her judgeship area, having been matron of the Tofino General Hospital, a public health nurse, school trustee, and Ucluelet Recreation commission president. She was a widow at the time of her appointment as a judge.

She said she received excellent co-operation on the bench. As for women judges in general, she said "in areas like I was in, they work out very well; but the choices must be suitable people, men or women."

Firm Charged In Pollution

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Columbia Cellulose Co., charged with causing a massive fish kill by polluting water, was remanded in a provincial court hearing. The company was charged under the Federal Fisheries Act after officials from the federal environment department analysed dead fish and water samples in the Porpoise Harbor and Wainwright Basin areas.

Canadian Film Venture

Spectacular Going Swimmingly

KLEINBURG, Ont. (CP) — Canadian film-makers have taken 291,000 gallons of water, added four Hollywood stars to swim in it, and hope the resulting movie will bring a flood of fans to the box office.

The Neptune Factor, a $1.5 million underwater adventure film which Nova Scotia-born Daniel Petrie begins shooting Monday, also features the most dazzling display of technology ever seen in this rural village north of Toronto — or for that matter, probably on any movie set anywhere in the country.

Co-produced by Toronto's Quadrant Films, The Neptune Factor is a mainly Canadian venture, with a $200,008 investment by the Canadian Film Development Corp., $50,000 from Famous Players, and some from private sources.

Toronto-born Gordon Stulberg, president of 20th Century-Fox, which invested $700,008, has informed his staff around the world that nothing short of "another 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" is the expected result.

Actually, the movie is described as a futuristic drama, and it concerns a romance between a woman marine biologist and an aquanaut, an earthquake in the ocean depths, and a specialized underwater rescue unit.

A lot of action involving Hollywood stars Walter Pidgeon, Yvette Mimeux, Ernest Borgnine and Ben Gazzara takes place in a 292,000-gallon sea tank erected on the parking lot of the arena in nearby Woodbridge.

While the stars flail around in the tank, they will be filmed by a special 15-man camera crew. Camermen handling underwater equipment had to take a course in diving, part of which was a two-hour written examination and a "free fall" in waters off Halifax.

Jack McAdam, a Toronto set designer with 10 years' experience at the CBC, has masterminded a bundle of electronic gadgets used in the movie, including a cassette TV set, a ship-to-shore communications network and an advanced chemical processing unit.

Big Hall Dwarfs Music Despite Big Talent

By BERT BINNY

The first in a projected series of four chamber concerts went on at the Newcombe Auditorium Thursday night.

Of these three requisites yesterday's performance had the second but clearly not the first. With its 575 capacity, the Newcombe is scarcely "a small concert room." The audience, also, was quite large and included many of the younger generation.

A hundred and fifty years after Burney's pronouncement, modern musical lexicographer, Dr. Percy Scholes, observed that "chamber music is not the entertainment of crowds. It is not heard to effect in big halls."

So, in a relatively big hall like the Newcombe, it is going to lose effect no matter how able and talented the performers. It is, indeed, hard on them when their brilliance is dimmed — as it easily could be — by being presented in an inappropriate locale.

The suggestion that this music could or should be electronically amplified is mod and trendy but, surely, this music — perhaps above all other — was never intended or composed with such treatment in mind?

Lead violinist David Harrington opened the program with a Beethoven sonata and he was accompanied by Susan de Burgh at the piano.

Harrington, seemingly a rather introspective performer, was particularly effective in the last Rondo movement but his accompanist was vital and sensitive throughout.

The next two items provided stern stuff: unaccompanied viola and unaccompanied oboe. A Fastasie by Telemann was most acceptably played by violist Robert Winquist. Oboe player Eileen Gibson, who played Benjamin Britten's Metamorphoses After Ovid, was likewise talented and a welcome guest artist on the program.

Following the interval an Introduction and Rondo by Canadian composer Dr. Murray Adaskin was played by Harrington and Winquist along with pianist Susan de Burgh and cellist Bonnie Hattis, and, for the finale, Eileen Gibson with the oboe joined the string players for a quartet by Mozart.

Fruit Trees

Judging by my mail, a surprising number of homeowners hereabouts are intending to buy and plant a few fruit trees either this fall or next spring. Nursery catalogues are being collected and studied, and I am being besieged with questions as to which is the best apple, pear or cherry for our district.

The choice of a variety is very much a matter of personal preference, and it would take a much braver or more opinionated man than me to come out flat-footed and say that such-and-such is the best apple or the best plum. About the only thing I can say, when answering such enquiries, is to tell them which kinds have done well in MY garden, in MY kind of soil, and which kinds are preferred by MY family.

I might say, in passing, that flavor is the main criterion with us; the most prolific cropper will find no place in our garden if its fruits don't please our palates.

One thing which is bothering me a bit is the fact that many of my correspondents seem to be planning the purchase of only one tree. These folks may be headed for bitter disappointment, for quite a few of our most popular fruits simply will not produce any crop unless a suitable pollinator or "mate" is growing nearby.

A solitary fruit tree, living in single blessedness, will start bearing blossoms as soon as it reaches sexual maturity, and sometimes small fruits will actually form, but these embryo fruits all drop off while still very small due to a lack of cross-pollination of the blossoms.

Sweet cherries are particulary difficult in this respect, for the most popular kinds not only refuse to bear a crop unless they have a mate, but they are extremely fussy when it comes to accepting a husband. For instance, you could have one tree each of Bing, Royal Ann and Lambert, and still you wouldn't get any fruit, for while all three need a mate, they are useless as mates to one another; their pollen is incompatible.

It is necessary to introduce an outsider such as Van to provide pollen for this temperamental "big tree" of cherrydom. Mind you, your Van cherry tree isn't just a stud for your Bing or Lambert or Royal Ann; the compatibility works both ways. A Van tree will produce good crops of delicious black cherries when its blossoms are fertilized with Bing, Lambert or Royal Ann pollen.

Fortunately for the homeowner with only a limited area for fruit, there is a new cherry called Stella which bears good crops of dark red sweet cherries even when no other cherry tree is near.

Apple trees are not as fussy, and you can be reasonably sure of a crop if you have two or more different varieties. Or, if space doesn't permit more than one apple tree, find out what kinds the neighbours have and plant a different variety. Both you and your neighbor will benefit from the cross-pollination.

There is a bit of a mystery surrounding the pollination of pears. By far the most popular pear hereabouts is Bartlett, and all the books state most emphatically that Bartlett will not produce any fruit when grown alone. Yet I know of at least half a dozen gardens where single Bartlett tree produces bumper crops. In the light of this experience I wouldn't hesitate to plant a single Bartlett tree, preferably a dwarf one, but if space permitted, I would add Beurre d'Anjou or Clapp's Favorite, both for a change in flavor and for cross pollination.

With plums, some kinds can produce good crops without a companion variety, but it is always a good rule with this fruit to plant more than one kind. Mallard and Golden Drop will produce no crop at all without a compatible mate, while others will double or triple their crop if the blossoms are cross-pollinated.

Our climate is certainly not ideal for peaches — we need colder winters and warmer summers to get the best from these trees — but at least we don't have any sex problems with the kinds commonly grown here. Rochester, Red Haven, Pacific Gold, Renton and Vedette are all self-fruitful, requiring no mates. You can run into trouble with some of the Ontario varieties, notably J. H. Hale, which needs pollen from another variety to produce its excellent fruits.

Hanoy Gets New Deal

It was a month ago that Herbert Hanoy walked into Honest Dick's Used Car Lot to look around and kick the tires.

He was immediately recognized by the firm's top salesman, Henry. "Well, well, back again Mr. Hanoy," said Henry, rubbing his hands, "and what can I show you today?"

"Frankly," said Hanoy, "I've been thinking about that red and white, two-door Ceasefire Eight. Of course, it doesn't have a synchromesh political settlement . . ."

"It's just the model for you, Mr. Hanoy," said Henry. "Look at that automatic withdrawal system, that tripartite power steering, those guaranteed free elections . . ."

"I bought a '54 French model once with guaranteed free elections," said Hanoy suspiciously. "It fell apart before I hardly got it home and nobody ever made good."

"You're not dealing with those tricky Frenchmen now," said Henry with dignity. "You're dealing with Honest Dick. Look, I'm going to make you an offer you can't refuse. We've got special E-Z terms on that Ceasefire Eight. This month only."

"Well, it isn't exactly what I wanted," said Hanoy reluctantly. "But if you can make me a good deal . . ."

"Just step into my office," said Henry happily. So they haggled for hours and hours and finally came up with an 18-page contract with lots of small print. On which they shook hands.

Naturally, Honest Dick, himself, was called in to look the deal over. "Congratulations, Mr. Hanoy," he said, after reading all the fine print. "You certainly got yourself a fine bargain there. I don't see any reason we can't have everything signed and delivered by next Tuesday — or November 6 at the very latest."

So Hanoy went home and told everybody he'd bought himself a used Ceasefire Eight. While he was somewhat uneasy about it, all his friends said he was doing the right thing.

Then he got a call from Henry. "Everything all right?" asked Hanoy anxiously.

"Sure, sure," said Henry. "No problems at all. Delivery's just around the corner. But first would you mind dropping by for one more little chat."

"If there's no problems," said Hanoy, "what's there to chat about?"

"Oh, just a little clarification of language. Like that part about tripartite power steering. It seems it isn't exactly power steering . . ."

"Look, we've got a contract and you promised to sign it by November 6," said Hanoy angrily.

"I think we promised to try to sign it by then," said Henry. "Confidentially, we're having a little trouble over the title. Seems there's this gentleman in Saigon who feels he's the legal owner. And to get his signature on the contract, I'm afraid you're going to have to — er — up your price just a little and . . ."

"A deal's a deal!" spluttered Hanoy. "Sign like you promised!"

"Well, seeing we're not exactly the legal owners . . ."

"You mean to tell me," shouted Hanoy, "that you've been trying to sell me a car you don't even own?"

"Now, now, Mr. Hanoy, there's no need to get excited," said Henry soothingly. "I'm sure it will all work out. After all, if you can't trust Honest Dick, who can you trust?"

But, unfortunately, Hanoy had already slammed down the receiver.

Well, anyone who's been through a similar experience can predict the outcome. Either you tear up the contract into teensy little pieces, muttering curses, or you up the ante and go through with the deal, feeling rooked and snookered and muttering curses.

In either case, one thing's for sure: You certainly aren't fit to live with.

Westerns Not Enough

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — A little studio visiting. First into the executive dining room of the old Warner Bros. and who should be sitting there but Dennis Morgan? Andy McLaglen, with whom I was lunching, looked over at Dennis: "I thought it was a dream."

Andy, who is so tall that he is the only person in town who knows that John Wayne is bald on top, is preparing to leave for Durango, Mex., to direct Wayne in Wednesday Morning. Andy and John love Durango which isn't exactly the garden spot of the world. But if you're going to shoot a western, it's the place to do it. Durango is Arizona and New Mexico in 1870. The handsome son of the late and great Victor is noted as a director of box-office westerns, usually starring Wayne who still thinks of him as a kid. Andy is 52.

"I directed 95 Gunsmokes and I guess that tabbed me as a so-called western director but I see no reason why I, or any other western director, should be limited to the outdoors." He's right, of course. John Ford and Howard Hawks are considered western directors but look at their record. Ford's The Informer and The Quiet Man are classic. Same with Hawks' Bringing Up Baby, probably one of the all-time great screen comedies. Andy also wants to go that route. He had a success with Fools' Parade starring Jimmy Stewart and George Kennedy set in the '30s. It was recently shown on TV. "I love that picture," says Andy.

Prejudice Ingrained

My older boy is very nimble at puzzles and conundrums and such, so the other day I gave him a poser I had recently heard. It went like this:

"A father and his son were in an auto accident. The father was killed and the son, seriously injured, was rushed to hospital. He needed immediate brain surgery and the hospital sent for the city's foremost brain surgeon.

"The surgeon arrived, looked at the boy, and said, 'I can't operate on this boy. He's my son.'"

The question: Who is the brain surgeon?

He gave up. "It doesn't make sense," he finally declared. But it does. It's only the set of our minds that doesn't make sense.

The brain surgeon, obviously, had to be the boy's mother. Who else could it be?

But our minds are so set on the "foremost brain surgeon" in a city being a man that we never doubt for a moment that a man is speaking, although nowhere is this stated.

My son admitted to his chauvinistic embarrassment. But how many older men would be willing to do the same?

They just automatically assume that a noted doctor has to be a man, although in Russia 75 per cent of all physicians are women, and in some European countries the proportion is now up to 50 per cent.

Last year, a New York Medical College professor of psychiatry sent out a questionnaire to the deans of all U.S. medical schools, asking them what they were doing to help women enter and remain enrolled in medical training, even if they were married.

He expressed surprise (in Medical Opinion, May, 1971) that "many outstanding medical educators expressed lack of interest, opposition, and even overt hostility to women in medicine."

According to the journal, Trans-Action, at most medical schools women have to report back to classes from three days to two weeks after having a baby, or risk losing all credit for work accomplished.

A man, by contrast, is often given up to two months leave (with full credit) if he has the misfortune to come down with mononucleosis.

"Babies interfere with a woman's medical career," say the deans — and then proceed to devise a schedule that makes it almost impossible for a married woman to go through internship and residency.

Prejudice of all kinds tends to be unconscious and ingrained.

It's not amazing that so many people can't figure out who the brain surgeon is, even though both logic and common sense point in the same direction.

Then, when we are caught out by the answer, our discomfiture prompts us to find rationalizing reasons to reinforce the original prejudice.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A meeting in the washroom of the Churchill Hotel at which a man asked an RCMP undercover agent if he had "a spike" — a hypodermic needle — was the beginning of a transaction which ended with the agent buying a cap of heroin, the agent said Thursday.

The agent, Const. Blaine Froates, was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Gerald Zaleschuk, 28, and David John Petrie, 22, charged jointly with trafficking in heroin in connection with the incidents.

At the end of the preliminary hearing in Victoria Provincial Court, Judge William Ostler committed both men to a higher court for trail on the charge.

Froates, who worked as an undercover agent for just over six months this summer, said that on July 11 he met Zaleschuk in the Churchill washroom about 7:30 p.m. when Zaleschuk asked him if he had a spike, which he said, was slang for a hypodermic needle.

He later talked to Zaleschuk at a table in the beer parlor, mostly about the Grim Reapers motorcycle club, and asked him if he knew where he could "score a cap of junk," meaning purchase a cap of heroin.

Froates said Zaleschuk told him he didn't have it himself to sell, but knew where to buy it for as little as $12 a cap. About 8:30 p.m. Petrie came in, Zaleschuk went and talked to him, and the three then got together in the hotel beer parlor.

Froates told Petrie he wouldn't pay more than $15 for a cap, and when Petrie said that was allright, Froates gave him a $20 bill from which he received $5 in change but Petrie didn't have the heroin in the beer parlor.

Because it was Froates' turn to play pool, Zaleschuk and Petrie left the beer parlor and Zaleschuk returned a few minutes later with a gelatin capsule containing a white powder and wrapped in foil which he gave to Froates, the RCMP officer testified.

He said he soon after gave the capsule to another policeman, and a certificate of analysis, which showed the substance in the capsule to be heroin, was entered as an exhibit at the hearing.

Ostler imposed total penalties of a $75 fine, a $41 order for restitution, a 30-day jail term, a two-year probation order and a two-year driving ban on Leo Eugene Overby, 17, of 3344 Hazelwood.

The fine, restitution order and probation order were given on a charge of wilful damage after defence counsel Doug Macfarlane argued successfully against a jail term for Overby on that charge. Macfarlane said that because of other pending charges, the 17-year-old youth would not be able to go to a young offenders' camp but would have to stay in Wilkinson Road jail which would not likely do him any good.

Overby then pleaded guilty to a charge of dangerous driving which resulted from a high-speed chase in the Victoria West-Esquimalt area. The chase lasted about 3½ miles during which Overby went through several stop signs and trafic lights.

Ostler imposed the 30-day jail term and driving ban on that charge.

Alan Roderick MacGillivray, 21, of 1975 McTavish, was fined $250 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of shoplifting a $4.88 sweater Oct. 7 from Woolco.

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder fined five persons $350 each after they pleaded guilty to charges of impaired driving.

The five were: Jerome Maurice Olaizola, 31, of 867 Craigflower, stopped Oct. 26 in Victoria; Donald Grant Wright, 63, of 3781 Cadboro Bay Road, stopped Sept. 28 in Saanich; Gayle Lester Fisher, 22, of 380 West Burnside, stopped Oct. 8 in Victoria; Peter Wendell Shaw, 27, of 1590 Verling, stopped in Saanich; and Donald MacDonald, 36, of 175 Virago Crescent, stopped Oct. 6 in Saanich.

Olaizola and Shaw were given six-month driving bans in addition to their fines.

Parking Areas Neater?

Screening of commercial parking lots by evergreen hedges or shrubs was made mandatory Thursday by Victoria city council.

The new rule will be in effect wherever a commercial parking lot adjoins a road.

Renewal of annual parking lot permits will depend on whether parking lot owners and operators have complied with the new regulation.

The compulsory screening requirement was introduced by the city to help offset the drab effect parking lots have on the city's over-all appearance, council said.

Last year, the city made mandatory the installation of proper drainage and the paving of all commercial parking lots. Most owners and operators have compiled with those regulations.

Loading Up On B.C. Line

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway reported Thursday a record number of car loadings for the month of October of 12,362, almost 22 per cent higher than loadings in October of 1971, when loadings were 10,167. Loadings for the first 10 months of 1972 were 109,173, up from 100,785 in the first 10 months of 1971. The railroad's extension to Fort Nelson was opened in September, 1971.

Teachers Ask Conciliator

VANCOUVER (CP) — The school board and the city's 2,700 teachers have asked the provincial education department to appoint a conciliator following a breakdown in contract talks. A spokesman for the teachers said both sides had agreed to a 9.16 per cent pay increase but that the board wanted elimination of some past benefits. The contract expires Dec. 31.

Apartment Clean-Up On 30-Day Deadline

Victoria city council decided Thursday to give Vancouver developer G. F. Mulek 30 days in which to begin cleaning up the mess left behind following completion of the highrise projects at Quadra and View.

Unless Mulek indicates within the 30-day period that he intends to proceed with construction of a proposed twin tower on the same site, he is to remove "the junk" there.

Mulek also is expected to pay for necessary repair work of the sidewalk, damaged during construction of the first tower.

Film Price: One Toy

One repairable toy will be the price of admission Saturday morning to a special children's showing at the Fox Theatre of The Three Stooges Meet Hercules.

The event will be part of a drive to allow inmates at William Head minimum security institution to send toys to their children at Christmas.

Toys collected will be sent out to the prison for repair.

If there are toys left over after each prisoner has a gift for his children, they will be sent to the Saanich Kiwanis for redistribution to welfare children.

Program co-ordinator Gary Warrington, a special counsellor to the John Howard Society said others wishing to donate toys can call his office at 386-9433 to arrange for toy pickup, as they can be deposited in barrels at Hillside Shopping Centre and major downtown churches.

Canada vs. U.S., France

Oceans at Stake

LONDON (CP) — Canada, on the one hand, and the United States and France, on the other, are locked in a fierce negotiating battle over the development of a convention to restrict ocean pollution, informants said Thursday.

At the heart of the reported struggle is a question of jurisdiction over ocean-going traffic and the asserted right of some of the nuclear powers to continue to dump radioactive waste in the oceans under "emergency" conditions.

The Canadian delegation, headed by Alan Beesley of the external affairs department, is reported to have concluded that unless there is a last-minute change of attitude, the convention that emerges will have little meaning for Canada and other coastal states.

Informants said strong words have been exchanged behind closed doors at Lancaster House where delegates from some 90 countries have been trying for almost two weeks to reach a compromise that will fit the anti-pollution spirit of Stockholm.

It was at the United Nations anti-pollution conference at Stockholm last June that jubilant Canadian officials felt they were making headway in seeking the right of coastal states to prosecute ships flying the flag of another country if they pollute the oceans nearby.

But informants said that as the London convention conference progressed it became apparent that the flag states, led by the U.S., were strongly opposed to that concept.

Company Asked To Face the Music

TORONTO (CP) — John Graham, chairman of Rogers Broadcasting Ltd., glanced at a program schedule and said:

"At the moment they're playing Only the Wise and Mighty, to be followed by It Never Entered My Mind."

What had never entered Graham's mind, he told Thursday's public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, was the possibility that a Rogers employee might be subjected to the torture test of listening to the continuous output of the Muzak Corp. on a channel rented from his company.

The possibility came up as Rogers applied for renewal of its licence to operate Toronto station CHFI-FM, which has just passed the halfway point in a 20-year lease of a multiplex channel to the Associated Broadcasting Corp., Muzak's Canadian outlet, for piping the corporation's background music into a variety of public buildings and business premises.

In preliminary consideration of the renewal application, CRTC officials asked Rogers whether it was prepared to accept responsibility for the content of Muzak transmissions, as required by the Broadcasting Act.

Not exactly, Graham told the hearing. The corporation supplies a schedule for its four-hour tapes but neither Rogers nor Associated Broadcasting has anything to do with the selection of material.

However, Rogers physically controlled the facility and could, at least in theory, cut a transmission off if it contained any offensive material.

The CRTC will announce its decision on the renewal application at a later date.

Pedestrian Week Stresses Cs

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Big Xs painted on Victoria street surfaces are NOT crosswalks. But try to convince some Greater Victoria pedestrians!

This is just one of the factors which pedestrians and car drivers alike should keep in mind all the time — but especially next week.

That period, from Monday to Nov. 19, has been designated by the Capital Region's safety council as Pedestrian Safety Week—1972.

It is the hope of John Reeves, the council's general manager, that for the coming week, and all the weeks to come, people on foot and in cars alike will observe the Three Cs of safety: Courtesy, Care, Consideration.

If they do, they will also save lives.

Stand on any street corner in downtown Victoria during a normal work day (it's worse in rush hours) and count the number of times one, two or all three of the Cs are ignored.

All that Reeves and the council which covers Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, Sidney, Colwood-Langford and Sooke ask people to do is to share the roads "in a reasonable and civilized manner."

"Both drivers and pedestrians have a road-sharing responsibility, but . . . the driver of the steel-bodied vehicle has the greater responsibility to avoid contact with the frail pedestrian," says a council statment.

Motorists are urged in the statement to use extra caution where children or elderly pedestrians are concerned, and drivers are reminded they must yield to pedestrians in marked or unmarked crosswalks not controlled by signs or signals.

However, the council said pedestrians must not step onto a street when it is obvious the car cannot stop in time, and pointed out that, at night, a pedestrian can spot a car more quickly than the driver can see the pedestrian.

Oh, yes — about those big Xs on the road. They're painted, for example, on both Fort and Yates streets, in each traffic lane, to warn car drivers there is a crosswalk ahead—an arrow farther along emphasizes the warning.

During a very few minutes Thursday a handful of walkers was seen to turn to the curb by these Xs, look down the street for cars, then stride confidently across the centre of the Xs to the opposite side.

This may have been closer to where they were headed — but it was some distance from the real crosswalk and a very long way from safety.

The safety council asked persons to remember that the elderly are the most frequent pedestrian traffic victims. About two-thirds of fatalities and injuries occur during the day in good weather and from 3 to 5 p.m. is the most hazardous time of day.

The statement asked parents, who drive their children to school, to refrain from such dangerous practices as double parking, unloading their children in mid-block on the opposite side of the street from the school and stopping atop or too close to a crosswalk.

And, the statement said, parents should drive their children to school only when necessary, rides should be pooled among neighbors and caution should be used when approaching or leaving a school in a car.

Of all pedestrian fatalities, 35 per cent occur in October, November and December.

During 1971 in the Capital Region, seven pedestrians were killed and 158 injured. Of the fatalities, five were in Victoria and two in Saanich.

To date this year four have been killed, 101 injured, with three fatalities in Victoria and one in Central Saanich.

The Canadian average every year is 600 pedestrians killed — 10 per cent of all traffic deaths — and 16,000 injured.

Here is the record for the last three Pedestrian Safety Weeks in the Capital Region: 1969: one killed; 1970: four injured; 1971: two injured.

It's improving, Reeves feels. Perhaps this year, with everyone exercising courtesy, care and common sense, the record may be kept completely clean.

Teachers Tossed Pay 'Ball'

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Two Greater Victoria school trustees tossed the ball firmly back into the teachers' court Thursday night as far as salary negotiations between the two groups are concerned.

Acting board chairman Hal Knight declined to make any public statement after the board held an unexpected meeting at 5:30 p.m. Thursday to discuss the progess of negotiations, but negotiating committee chairman Walter Donald and veteran trustee Peter Bunn, speaking only as individual trustees, levelled harsh criticism against the teachers in the current round of negotiations.

Limits Removed

"When the NDP government removed the limitations on teachers' salary increases, they said the teachers would be responsible in their demands and negotiations. I don't think they have been being responsible. That's what really burns me up," said Bunn.

Bunn and Donald challenged the teachers to use some of the money they would get by pushing their salary demands to the limit to improve educational quality in the district, especially to hire more teachers.

In its provisional budget passed earlier this week, the board alloted a total of costs of fringe benefits and salaries, an increase of 13.3 per cent over 1972.

This increase of about $2.1 million, it was explained, would cover salary increases, costs of fringe benefits and salaries for all new teachers hired by the district during 1973.

How much of the increase will go to each of the three categories is up to the teachers, said Donald.

If the teachers insist on pushing for the same sort of settlements that have been negotiated in the two Lower Mainland districts that have settled, and if they get that sort of settlement, there will be very little left over for the hiring of new teachers, Donald said.

The Lower mainland settlements, in Surrey and Burnaby, have been in the area of 9 per cent.

A 9 per cent increase locally would mean that $1.4 million of the $2.1 million would go to salary increases for present teachers leaving only $700,000 for all fringe benefits for all teachers and for hiring new teachers.

New Teachers

But if the teachers would settle for an increase of 7.5 per cent, an extra $240,000 would be available for further new teachers.

At an average salary of between $10,000 and $11,000 each, that extra $240,000 could provide more than 20 extra teachers to the district. Aim of hiring more teachers would be to reduce average class size, a matter which has been of considerable concern to trustees.

The teachers have been asking in negotiations for an increase of about 12.3 per cent, and Knight said the board's first offer had been 6.5 per cent — the recommended guideline that had been set provincially in 1972.

No Statement

Donald said no statement could be made regarding specifics of negotiations at the moment because the talks were "at a crucial stage."

If agreement is not reached before Tuesday, the district and the teachers' association must apply for arbitration, although they are free to continue negotiating on their own for a settlement up to Dec. 31.

Donald said what he was looking for was "a fair, reasonable settlement for the teachers which won't hamper education quality in the district." And a settlement that didn't allow the class sizes to be reduced would not fit that definition, he said.

Fair Increase

Basically, he felt a fair settlement would be one equal to the yearly increase in the cost of living, in this case less than 5 per cent.

Bunn said he felt that if the board got some of the other things it was looking for in negotiations, a settlement as high as 7.5 per cent would be acceptable.

But what he would really like to see, he said, was the teachers' agreeing to a 7.5 increase provided the board would spend the equivalent of an extra 1 per cent on hiring new teachers. Both he and Donald were convinced the board would agree to such a condition.

Unique Move

A settlement like that, he said, would form a unique precedent which would raise the image of teachers very much among the parents and taxpayers of the district.

But neither of the two were optimistic that teachers could be persuaded to agree to a 7.5 per cent increase in light of other increases around the province.

If other boards had insisted on lower increases it might be possible for Greater Victoria to follow suit, but with the 9 per cent settlements elsewhere, it was not likely the district could keep its increases as low as it would wish, said Donald.

"Anyway, the ball's in their court now," he said. "And we're waiting for an answer."

City Initiates Steps To End Stalemate

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Victoria city council initiated steps Thursday that may form the basis for a settlement with Victoria developer J. A. Mace over the controversial Bay Village shopping centre.

Basis for the attempted settlement will be a compromise to which both Mace and the city agreed last June.

That compromise calls for construction of a 24-storey highrise and a reduction of the project's overall density. The developer's original plans were for construction of a 29-storey tower with a higher density.

Plans for a shopping centre will remain unaffected. The entire development is to be built at Menzies and Simcoe in James Bay.

Although the two parties had agreed on the compromise last June, they failed to reach final settlement because of several technicalities.

Mace at that time insisted that the compromise be written into his original land-use contract with the city; failing that, he wanted city council's assurance that the city would sign a second land-use contract if he were to submit it.

The city rejected both requests. Council invited Mace to abandon his original contract, which had already been approved by the previous council, and submit an application for a new contract with no assurance of approval on the part of the city.

When the two sides reached a deadlock last June, Mace proceeded with legal action against the city. He sued the city for unspecified damages incurred as a result of the delay. He also insisted that the city sign the original contract. That contract was approved by the previous council, but never signed by the city.

At the moment, the city is several days overdue in filing its statement of defence.

To overcome the apparent difficulties, city council decided Thursday to hold a public hearing at which aldermen will discuss a land-use contract based on the compromise.

There are a number of somewhat unique aspects involved in the city's move to reopen the lines of communication with the developer.

First, Mace isn't expected to be at the public hearing. Second, the land-use contract before council will have been prepared by the city and not by the developer.

There will also be no bylaw prepared for the contract prior to the public hearing.

Central Saanich's Cable Bid Backed

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen Thursday night backed a Central Saanich council bid made earlier this week for private cablevision companies to submit any expansion plans for council scrutiny before receiving Canadian Radio Television Commission approval.

Last Monday the Saanich Peninsula council unanimously approved the resolution for a municipality's council to check out any proposed plan for cablevision extensions in the municipality before it goes before the CRTC.

The bid was brought to council by Ald. Ted Clayards, who explained in an interview Thursday "this is merely to insure a fair distribution of TV cablevision service to all parts of a municipality."

The resolution willl be sent to the provincial secretary and the CRTC chairman.

Clayards said this would stop any possible "cream-off" policy of a cablevision company in serving only heavily populated areas of a municipality and bypassing the more scarcely settled parts.

He said he realized that to bring cablevision into an area was expensive. "But a company should be able to take the good with the bad and service a complete area, not just those parts which will give the best returns."

Pollen said the move by Central Saanich reinforces his argument that the CRTC is "protecting and assisting" the business operation of cablevision companies rather than the users.

He also claimed the transport commission was doing the same for the telephone companies.

He said both commissions should be investigated so their policies could be revamped.

South Africa Cleric Hails Barnes' Move

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

Action such as that taken by NDP MLA Emery Barnes in refusing to open a tennis tournament because of participation by South Africans is a great help to those South Africans opposed to apartheid, says Rev. Gonville french-Beytagh, former Anglican Dean of Johannesburg.

"The average South African doesn't have much brain but likes using it," said the canon Thursday during a visit to Victoria.

"If you touch him in the area of sport you are bringing immense pressure to bear."

french-Beytagh also wants to see labor unions taking action on the South African question by discouraging tradesmen from going to South Africa to work.

Withdrawal of skilled white labor, he said, would force the employment of blacks in positions above laboring jobs.

He also believes Commonwealth preferences should be withdrawn from South Africa, which is no longer part of the Commonwealth.

Such action, he believes, is necessary, as there is no hope of a successful uprising against the government within the country.

All the intellectuals, lawyers, doctors and people of influence who could have led such an uprising are imprisoned on Robin's Island off Cape Town, many of them for life, after being charged under the Terrorist Act. There are about 1,000 to 1,200 men, all potential leaders, imprisoned there.

There will be, he predicted, acts of violence, because human beings cannot stand without protest the kind of treatment given the blacks.

The black men, he said, are treated as slaves, considered simply as a labor pool. Wives and children are regarded as encumbrances, and education up to a primary level (enough to make them adequate laborers) is provided for blacks only if it is paid for — white children are educated free.

There are 17 million black people there, ruled by 3½ million whites, and such a rule can only continue, he said, with security police, paid informers and other similar means.

People being interrogated have died during questioning, although such deaths have always been ruled accidental.

"Do you believe this? I don't," he told about 400 people who went to Christ Church Cathedral to hear him speak.

All this, he said, is being done in the name of a Christian government — the Dutch Reformed Church stands wholeheartedly behind the government and the Afrikaan people are deeply religious.

They believe that apartheid is the will of God.

Fifth Seeks Job On School Board

Sullivan

Advocating more control of expenditures and more community use of school facilities, John Sullivan, 38, of 302-707 Esquimalt Road, has filed his nomination papers as a candidate for Greater Victoria school board in the Dec. 9 civic elections. He is the fifth to declare his intention to run.

Sullivan, who is financial chairman at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, has also been a private school teacher.

"I am familiar with both private and public school systems," he said, "I believe it's time for some new blood on the school board."

As a brother in the Salesian order of St. John Bosco, Sullivan was involved with the financing of some private schools in California.

He was born and raised in Victoria, leaving the city when he entered a seminary, Don Bosco College in Newton, N.J.

He taught in Salesian schools in California, later becoming registrar and administrator of finance in one of the high schools.

He returned to Victoria in 1970.

Sullivan, who wants to see a improved drug program in public schools, is active in community affairs. He is on the board of the St. Vincent de Paul Society. He is interested in the local Autistic Society, is political chairman of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 276, at the Empress Hotel where he is employed as a timekeeper, a Knights of Columbus member, and a director of Victoria Taxi.

Victoria Supports Pollen

Mayor Peter Pollen's endeavor to have the Capital Region declared a regional economic expansion area was backed Thursday by Victoria city council.

The idea was also endorsed last Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Pollen's plan is to get Ottawa to declare the Capital Region a designated area under the federal government's regional economic expansion department.

The idea is to take advantage of the incentives offered under the expansion program to attract secondary industry.

Following approval by all Greater Victoria-area councils, the resolution is to be sent on to the Capital Regional Board, which is to submit it to the federal government.

The Kootenays is the only area in B.C. under the program. Incentives offered industry for locating in designated areas go as high as 25 per cent of the cost of building a new plant, plus up to $5,000 for each new job created.

Mail Delays Explained

Although many delays in mail service are occurring, Canada Post Office is continuing to handle the bulk of its mail efficiently, Victoria post office spokesman Ken Stofer said Thursday. Stofer acknowledged it often takes three or four days for delivery on the Vancouver-Victoria run. Among reasons given are unusually heavy mail volume, turnover of staff at the Vancouver office and changes in sorting systems.

The Canadian law that bans partisan political broadcasts on radio or TV in the 48 hours before any election day has been upheld by the Ontario Supreme Court.

A Toronto radio station claimed the law violates the Canadian Bill of Rights by interfering with a broadcaster's freedom of speech. But the court said the law is not designed to control the course of a referendum or the election of a candidate.

Instead, it aims at preventing partisan political comment that cannot be answered before an election.

The station also said it was unfair that the law does not apply to newspapers but the court replied it applies equally to all broadcasters and their broadcasts "are in a different category to newspapers or other news media."

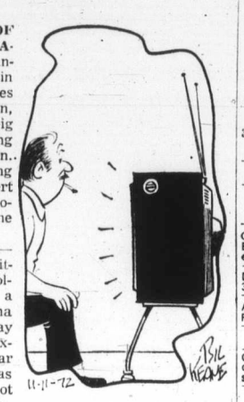
BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer — The three main stars of The Rogues were David Niven, Charles Boyer and Gig Young although Young was seen most often. The two neat supporting regulars were Robert Coote and Gladys Cooper and they were the real stars.

Today's question — The first real public criticism of TV violence followed an episode in a 1961-62 Warners' drama series shown Sunday evenings. Marilyn Maxwell was a regular star and the episode was called Told by An Idiot and starred Fabian. Name the series; the answer Tuesday, after the holiday.



11-1-72

"Now, stay tuned for the Nixon Administration, Part II."

Friday Highlights

C-7:30 p.m. — Those who like comedian Alan King will agree his topic in an hour special, aggravation, suits his style perfectly. Helpers include Lee Grant, Tony Randall, Jack Klugman, Larry Storch—8.

C-8:30—All in the Family zeroes in on the wedding of Mike and Gloria—2, 6,

C-9:00—Masterpiece Theatre begins the repeat run of the Balzac drama Cousin Bette—9.

CABLE 10—7:00 p.m., Arts Calendar; 7:30, Judy Nyquist and the Community Chest program People Helping People; 8:30, return of the series All About Curling with Keith MacKenzie; 9:00, return of Chroniques de France; 9:30, UN Achievements.

Friday Movies

C-9:30 a.m.—Naked in the Sun (dumb 1957 western). To give you an idea how poor this is, the big star is James Craig—4.

12:00 noon—Woman of Distinction (1950 romanticomedy), Rosalind Russell, Ray Milland. Some like these antiques but it's out of date and therefore is better out of sight and mind—13.

C-4:00 p.m.—Yuma (1970 Clint Walker western). I repeat: no Walker movie is great but all Walker movies are at least fair—5.

C-4:00—Banning (silly 1967 golf-pro corruption), Robert Wagner, James Fasentino, Jill St. John. Apropos of nothing, Mickey Rooney is going to star in a war drama called 12 o'Clock Short—7.

C-7:30—A Clear and Present Danger (good 1969 pollution drama), Hal Holbrook, E. G. Marshall. Pilot for the fine Senator series—13.

C-8:30—The Victim (new suspense), Elizabeth Montgomery, George Maharis, Sue Ane Langdon. Could be pretty good—8.

● C-9:00—Cat Ballou (hilarious 1965 western spoof), Lee Marvin, Jane Fonda, Nat Cole, Stubby Kaye. Have a ball—7.

11:00—Duck Soup (merry 1933 Marx Brothers antique)—11.

C-11:30—Die, Die, My Darling (1965 Tallulah Bankhead horror). With Stefanie Powers and done in the amusing Bette Davis style—7.

C-11:30—Courtship of Eddie's Father (1963 romanticomedy, not bad), Glenn Ford, Shirley Jones. You may already have noted it's a fine movie day with 18 on the list and 15 of them all right—12.

11:50—Roaad to Utopia (1945 Bob Hope-Bing Crosby chuckler). The one with that hilarious song Put It There, Pal—2.

C-12:00—The Victim (see 8:30)—6.

C-12:00—Journey to the Seventh Planet (terrible 1962 sci-fi), John Agar, Greta Thyssen. One of the day's few stinkers—8.

12:30 a.m.—The Night Holds Terror (first-rate 1955 suspense documentary), Jack Kelly, Vince Edwards, John Cassavetes. Try it—13.

1:00 a.m.—Boom Town (1939 MGM adventure, corny but fun), Gable, Spender Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, Claudette Colbert—4.

1:20—Werewolf of London (1935 horror), Henry Hull, Warner Oland. Books about early horror films give chapters to Frankenstein and Dracula but generally ignore this good oldtimer—7.

1:35—Mississippi (entertaining 1935 W. C. Fields-Bing Crosby affair). And speaking of Mickey Rooney, I hear he's going to be in an airliner drama entitled The Short and the Mighty—12.

Friday Radio

11:00—Showcase stars Catherine (Emily Carr) McKinnon—CBU-FM.

240 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

GROCERY STORE OR INVESTMENT
Located in a good residential area this store has a turnover of approx. $83,000.00 per year. The equipment includes a complete butcher shop but it is not in operation at present. Plenty of opportunity for a large increase in turnover. Asking price $46,000.00 plus stock.
If an investor would care to purchase the land and building at $37,000.00, the present store operator would be willing to continue running the store on a lease basis. Be sure to check this, it is a dandy.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7 WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded, or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call.

Subject to Congress Approval:

Fishermen Invited Out of Rain

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — "We've been out in the rain for a long time now. But I guess that's okay — we've got our slickers."

The remark was made with a smile in a hotel hallway here Thursday by Homer Stevens. The tall, soft-spoken veteran of many labor struggles may have had reason to feel the day was approaching when he would lead his fishermen's union out of the rain and into the house of labor.

A few minutes earlier the 600 delegates to the B.C. Federation of Labor convention had united strongly behind the latest effort of their executive officers to win re-affiliation in the Canadian Labor Congress for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

Danger Point

The long, frustrating battle to return the fishermen almost reached the do-or-die stage at this year's convention. It has been the overriding piece of business almost since the five-day convention started Monday. The seeming danger point lay in an International Woodworkers of America resolution calling for immediate seating of the fishermen at the present session.

This would have been in defiance of the CLC, which ousted the fishermen in the Red-baiting days of the 1950s for political leanings. Thursday, federation president George Johnston reaffirmed that the resolution was unconstitutional because of this and ruled it out of order.

It was replaced by a fairly strong policy statement from the executive officers and resolutions committee calling for a decision next month from the CLC executive council to re-instate the fishermen failing that, the federation will call a special meeting of its own executive council "to consider all possible courses for action to carry out the wishes of this convention."

While support of this move was unanimous, it was pointed out from the floor that there was no real action the federation could take, short of something that might get it in trouble with the CLC.

Risk Expulsion

Such extremes, of course, are highly unlikely, although more than one delegate has suggested that the federation should risk expulsion by taking the fishermen back into the fold.

The federation's officers appear optimistic that the 30-man CLC executive council will rule in favor of the fishermen when it meets in Ottawa Dec. 5 to 7. CLC executive vice-president Bill Dodge hinted at this during a somewhat stormy session with federation delegates earlier this week.

And Al Staley of Victoria, a former president of the federation and a current member of the CLC executive council, said Thursday he would work to have the dictates of the policy carried out.

If the fishermen are re-instated it would have to be by some other means than merger with the big Amalgamated Meatcutters, a proposal they rejected earlier. Merger of unions considered to be in the same field is CLC policy of entry. Some exceptions can be made.

Stevens, who sat in during sessions of the convention as an observer, said in the hallway interview that he hoped the CLC would finally "get the message."

"If they don't they're going to be treading on touchy ground," he said in reference to the mood of the federation.

Stevens thinks the decision of all delegates to unite behind the policy statement and not push the controversial resolution is all that prevented a serious split in the convention. "Unity is important and this is an important issue," he said.

His "long time" in the rain is about 19 years.

"I last addressed the federation as a member in 1953," he said.

"The CLC suspended us in 1953 and expelled us in 1954."

When we win, you win.

Datsun has won more rally championships than any other car in Canada. Against the best competitors. Under the worst conditions.

So what? Maybe all you really need is a car that behaves sensibly and economically in traffic or on the freeway.

So this: the things that have helped us win rallies are standard equipment on the Datsuns you'll find in your dealer's showroom.

Front disc brakes, overhead cam power, independent rear suspension and tough unit body construction add up to a car that will survive wherever you drive. And because they're all yours at no extra cost, they also add up to a lot more car for your dollar.

OTTAWA (CP) — Government housing bills are expected to reappear early in the next session of Parliament looking much as they did in the last parliamentary sitting.

They include the mortgage financing bill and amendments to the National Housing Act outlining new programs for neighborhood and home improvements.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford both have said the NHA amendments will have high priority in the new parliamentary session, expected in January.

Prison Service Morale Debated

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The executive of the Correctional Branch Workers' Union endorsed a request that the director of the correctional service, Selwyn Rocksborough-Smith, be dismissed because of low morale in the service. The Prince George local of the Prince George correctional centre will vote Nov. 16 on the recommendation.

New Parliamentary Session

Housing Bills First

OTTAWA (CP) — Government housing bills are expected to reappear early in the next session of Parliament looking much as they did in the last parliamentary sitting.

They include the mortgage financing bill and amendments to the National Housing Act outlining new programs for neighborhood and home improvements.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford both have said the NHA amendments will have high priority in the new parliamentary session, expected in January.

The mortgage financing bill, which would establish a Residential Mortgage Market Corp., is expected to go through the Commons even earlier than the NHA bill as there appears to be little opposition.

A new piece of legislation designed to assist municipalities in relocating railway tracks is being drafted. The legislation, proposed by Basford during the election campaign, likely will be introduced later in the session.

No significant changes in the NHA amendments are likely.

However, discussion at the federal-provincial conference on housing in January could force alterations. The conference was proposed by the provinces earlier this year and accepted by Basford.

Prison Service Morale Debated

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The executive of the Correctional Branch Workers' Union endorsed a request that the director of the correctional service, Selwyn Rocksborough-Smith, be dismissed because of low morale in the service. GREAT CANADIAN READING

There's at least one book in this list that you promised yourself to read. Beautiful gift ideas too, for students or others interested in Canadian History.

"THE GREAT RAILWAY ILLUSTRATED"—by Pierre Berton. The entire railway building period from 1871 to 1885, comes graphically illustrated. 10 thousand words of text and 275 photographs. Handsomely printed in two colours and slipcased. 17.95

"KLONDIKE" the last great gold rush 1896 - 1899 by Pierre Berton. 472 pages capture the grandeur and sweep of the last great gold rush. Tales of unbelievable hardship, heroism and villainy abound. $10

THE COLOUR OF CANADA (revised edition). A gorgeous pictorial tour of Canada from Newfoundland to B.C. with 127 pages — over one hundred of them in full colour. Text by Hugh Maclennan. A beautiful gift! 5.95

"THE LAST SPIKE"—by Pierre Berton. Companion volume to the National Dream. Covers the actual construction period of the C.P.R. $10

"A WHALE FOR THE KILLING"—by Farley Mowat. In this, his latest and perhaps most powerful book, Farley Mowat relates in poetic and evocative language, the painful tragic story of his attempt to save the trapped whale from the pointless "sport" of a handful of people. 6.95

NAMES in the NEWS

McGovern Taking A Holiday

Reagan
. . . self-censorship

ST. THOMAS — Senator George McGovern, his chartered jet and secret service protection gone, stood in line with ordinary tourists to fly to the Virgin Islands for a week of rest after his crushing election defeat.

On arriving with his wife Eleanor and their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kimelman, the senator took a swim before joining the Kimelmans for dinner at their private estate.

Kimelman, a wealthy land speculator who served as McGovern's campaign finance chairman, said he had invited Sargent and Eunice Shriver to be his guests next week along with the McGoverns.

LOS ANGELES — Governor Ronald Reagan, reacting to the defeat of an anti-obscenity initiative in Tuesday's election, said the movie industry should impose its own censorship code. The initiative, which was fought by filmmakers, lost by a margin of 5.2 million votes to 2.5 million. Reagan told a news conference people are "sick and tired of film pornography" and the movie business, after defeating outside controls, "has a responsibility now to impose its own self-censorship."

CHICAGO — Chicago's blacks — normally certain to vote straight Democratic — split their tickets in unprecedented numbers to hand incumbent State's Attorney Edward Hanrahan a crippling defeat that could end his political career. It was a staggering blow to Mayor Richard Daley's once-powerful Democratic machine. Results showed 10 of 14 predominantly black wards voted for Republican Bernard Carey, the first time in many years that a Republican had swept the vote. Carey also ran strong in the other four wards.

HEIDELBERG, Germany — The top American general in Europe said Russia was building up the world's mightiest military machine while negotiations encouraged an atmosphere of "wishful thinking" in the West. Gen. Andrew Goodpaster, supreme Allied commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, reviewed Soviet military capabilities and the dangers of detente in a speech to the Heidelberg chapter of the Association of the United States Army. "Despite all the talk of detente and accommodation, the last few years have been marked by a continuing and disturbing growth in Russian military strength," he said.

DETROIT — A 28-year-old Canadian hair stylist who attacked Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin in Ottawa last year is seeking political asylum in the United States to escape what he called persecution by the regime of Prime Minister Trudeau. Geza Matrai of Toronto said he crossed the border here Thursday and faces a minimum of eight months in jail for violating his probation if he returns to Canada.

L'ORIGNAL, Ont. — A 27-year-old Montreal woman was sentenced to six years in prison for her part in the strangling of her bachelor uncle. Lise Parent pleaded guilty to manslaughter in court two weeks ago. She had originally been charged with non-capital murder. The blood-stained body of Gabriel Lalonde, 50, was found bound and gagged in his farmhouse near here last July 12. About $700 was missing from the house.

W1 HEAVY-DUTY WASHER HAS 14-lb. CAPACITY

Fourteen pounds of laundry problems vanish at once in our Baycrest automatic washer. Sturdily built with porcelain top and lid, and heavy-duty transmission. Choose from 5 water temperatures, enough to treat fine washables gently or to get the grease out of heavily soiled workclothes. 2 speeds, too. Lock and spin safety feature. White.

Avocado or harvest gold $10 extra.

GREAT VALUE $189

W2 ELECTRIC DRYER HAS 3 TIMED CYCLES

Set it for regular, low, or air fluff timed cycle or set it for automatic cycle. It's just the companion for our Baycrest washer — of steel and porcelain with a porcelain drum. Handy front lint filter. If you have children, it's nice to know there's a safety switch that stops dryer when door is open; starts again only by pushing start button. White.

Avocado or harvest gold $10 extra.

WARRANTY — Both washer and dryer for 1 year, parts and labour, 4 additional years on washer transmission only.

Resignations

Shakeup Details Honed By Nixon

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — As the first of hundreds of standby resignations reached his desk, President Nixon worked Thursday on his executive branch shakeup.

His aim is to squeeze the fat out of the bureaucracy while making it more efficient in his second four-year term.

Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon conferred wth key aides here and spent some time alone "thinking through in a more intensive way than he has before" the methods of shaping his second administration.

Within hours after his re-election Tuesday, Nixon instructed all his appointees to turn in proforma resignations. Offers to resign traditionally follow a president's re-election, but seldom if ever has tradition been underscored by a White House announcement of the fact.

Ziegler said Nixon's instructions apply also to officials appointed by department heads or cabinet members. There are hundreds — perhaps several thousand — of such political appointees.

"It's very extensive, there's no question about that," the press secretary said.

The president wanted to "clear the slate" so he could have "a free hand to form his second-term administration through appointment and reappointment," Ziegler said.

Hijack Team Leery

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Cuban police had to prove to hijackers of a Mexicana Airline Boeing 727 that they actually were in Havana and not Miami before the group would surrender its arms and $320,000 cash ransom, passengers said Thursday on returning to Mexico.

A total of 73 passengers and seven crew members were forced to accompany the hijackers to Havana as hostages Wednesday after the plane was hijacked out of Monterrey, an industrial city in northern Mexico.

Two of the passengers were officials of the U.S. consulate in Monterrey, Wesley Parsons, 29, and Steve Evans, 46, both of Phoenix, Ariz. A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Mexico City said another American, Charles Dill, also was aboard. None of the Americans made public statements about the hijacking.

Five hijackers, identifying themselves as leftist guerrillas, forced officials in Monterrey to release six persons imprisoned there on robbery charges and took them, plus two others who joined them, to Havana.

Lansky Treated At Hospital

MIAMI (UPI) — Meyer Lansky, the reputed financial adviser of the American underworld, was reported in satisfactory condition in the Mount Sinai medical centre, where he is undergoing treatment for "cardiac insufficiency."

Weather Halts Search

WINNIPEG (CP) — Poor weather Thursday forced postponement of the search for four men, including three in a helicopter on northeastern Manitoba since last Friday.

The missing helicopter was under contract to the federal government to pick up ballot boxes from the Oct. 30 federal election in 10 isolated polls in Churchill riding.

Indians Told:

Same Laws For All

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Minister without Portfolio Frank Calder told Indian chiefs here Thursday he wants to study ways in which B.C. legislation can be applied to Indians as well as to other citizens.

There's no way your government is going to set up an Indian affairs branch in B.C.," Calder told the Union of B.C. Chiefs conference. Calder, a Nishga chief, was being questioned by the union's executive council about his assignment to deal with Indian affairs.

He said the government was going to investigate moving onto the reserves with services, but wouldn't do so without dialogue with both the Indians and the federal government. The provincial government had no intention of taking over control of Indians, he said.

Calder said service such as dental care, optical service and drugs could be provided to Indians.

He said the province proposes only to provide the same services to Indians as it does to anyone else, and that in some areas, the Indian people would not even be consulted, citing as an example the possibility of an air ambulance service for people in outlying areas.

Calder also told the chiefs they would have control of the provincial First Citizens' Fund. An order-in-council is being made to name Indians to the five positions on the fund's advisory board.

previsouly, the $25 million fund which provides grants to projects which will aid Indian communities, was administered by a government group headed by former municipal affairs minister Dan Campbell.

Also in Prince Rupert, Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said more than 2,000 Indian children are kept in institutions in the province, many without any necessity.

Levi said the New Democratic Party government will take a completely different direction in its approach to problems with native children with a view to keeping as many as possible in their homes.

He said that in many cases, children are sent to institutions only because there is no other place for them.

Judge Deplores Parole Course

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge Les Bewley criticized the National Parole Board Thursday as he sentenced Lyle Garfield Angevine, 42, to a year in jail for possession of a .45-calibre revolver. Bewley said Angevine was free on his fifth parole from federal prisons since 1950 when he was last arrested in Vancouver. "Surely the parole board won't release him again," said the judge. "This is yet another example of parole board inefficiency and bungling."

Monday Movies Sports, Primetime

PICK OF THE DAY

NOTE: Channel 10 will not broadcast today as the staff takes a holiday for Remembrance Day.

9:00 a.m. — KVOS follows its usual practice on a Monday holiday of showing a children's cartoon film, in this case Treasure Island — 12.

11:30 — Sesame Street starts a new season. Also at 4 p.m. — 9.

8:00 — Sally Struthers leads the Laugh-In guest list — 5; PBS Special of the Week is a documentary-drama about an Anglican monastery in the U.S. Midwest— 9.

10:00 — The CBC halted Tenth Decade reruns for the election campaign and starts them again with the 1963-65 period — 2, 6.

11:30 — Johnny Carson returns to New York for the first time since his move to Burbank and will stay there until Dec. 1 — 5.

MONDAY MOVIES

Jack Hawkins
11:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12

Robert Mitchum
11:50 p.m., Channel 2

4:00 p.m. — Harper (1966 hardboiled private eye, color), Paul Newman, Lauren Bacall. Part one now, part two in 24 hours and both fairly good — 5.

4:00 — Angel in My Pocket (1969 new-minister comedy-drama, color), Andy Griffith, Edgar Buchanan. Fair — 7.

Forsyte Saga Marathon Takes Toll of Viewers

LONDON (UPI) —Sixty stout souls lasted all the way from the opening title to the final tearful scene where Fleur cries "forgive me, Daddy" at her father's deathbed. There wasn't a wet eye in the house.

It was more a question of surviving than sobbing during a marathon nonstop showing of the television serial The Forsyte Saga, which went on and on and on for 26 installments and 24 hours.

"I kept going, thanks to my wife," said Michael Marshall. "She kept giving me nudges to keep me awake."

The 60 survivors emerged from a London theatre, blinking and yawning.

They were the hardy elite of 165 persons who paid $2.80 each to watch the special screening of the John Galsworthy classic, part of the British Broadcasting Corporation's 50th anniversary celebrations.

The marathon was too much for the rest. Some came and went just to see installments they had missed on television. For others the almost endless unfolding of tear-jerking episodes was just too much.

Despite bleary eyes and stiff limbs, the surviving 60 burst into applause when the words "the end" finally rolled up the screen.

There were three eight-hour shifts of projectionists for the screening but the audience got only short meal and rest breaks.

"They all perked up after breakfast this morning," said assistant theatre manager Scott Meeks. "It seemed to revive them because then they knew that they were going to see it through."

Many of the audience hummed a tune as they passed out of the theatre's doors and headed for home.

Small wonder.

Soap Opera B

A band of soap opera buffs as yet unnamed — the Bubble Street Irregulars? — is organizaing itself in Boston. Numbering Harvard professors as well as housewives, students as well as stay-at-homes, these soap groupies take their passion seriously. Their premise is that "the soaps are a sort of mirror of our society." Upon this premise they are erecting a platform: Make soap operas more "relevant."

A perfectly OK-goes-without-saying ideal these days, one supposes. But is "relevance" really what soap operas should be about? Life is inescapably full of "relevance." Newspaper headlines scream it. Soap Opera Buffs Organizing

Misunderstanding Name of Game

A band of soap opera buffs as yet unnamed — the Bubble Street Irregulars? — is organizaing itself in Boston. Numbering Harvard professors as well as housewives, students as well as stay-at-homes, these soap groupies take their passion seriously. Their premise is that "the soaps are a sort of mirror of our society." Upon this premise they are erecting a platform: Make soap operas more "relevant."

A perfectly OK-goes-without-saying ideal these days, one supposes. But is "relevance" really what soap operas should be about? Life is inescapably full of "relevance." Newspaper headlines scream it. Novels, plays, and films are absolutely crammed with the stuff. The relevance-market is oversupplied.

Mixed Report

Is there no place one can go for a little quiet irrelevance now and then? Along with the hot bath, soap opera has been one of the world's favorite forms of escape. At least until now. Are things changing — to borrow a soap's title — As the World Turns?

A current survey of the soaps, jumping from cake to cake like Liza on the ice, porcudes a mixed report. Yes, things are changing. Yes, the more they change, the more some things remain the same.

The perennial laws governing this pop art may be imperfectly summed up thus:

Raw Material

Soap opera is a romanticization of the ordinary. Its miliue — peace, women's liberation — is still the kingdom of the housewife. It ecstasies, its despairs, its dreams must be those visible from the top of a hot cup on the kitchen table. "Family" is the name of the drama.

Soap opera must move slowly, like the 19th-century serialized novels — and for the same reason. To make a plot move slowly, nothing helps like a good misunderstanding.

Misunderstanding is the raw material of soap opera. One of the recurrent lines of the old radio soap opera, Our Gal Sunday, read: "I don't follow you, Sunday." Everybody said it to her, including her husband.

Nobody gets things straight in soap operas. Sheer lack of perception keeps problems that could have been resolved in seconds building by gometrical progression for weeks.

Soap opera relies upon coincidence almost as much as upon the obtuseness of its characters. Frequently it combines both. For instance, an obtuse, character — just by coincidence — will enter a phone booth next to, say, his sister-inlaw and overhear the misleading conclusion of an innocent conversation. If he is in good form, Obtuse Character will then misinterpret the remarks while not neglecting to guess wrong about whom they were addressed to. By coincidence, he will instantly run into the story's ogre and tell all.

Every soap opera must have its Ogre. An Ogre is usually rich, often powerful, and sometimes a mother-in-law. People are always telling the Ogre: "You've got to let people live their own lives." But it never does any good. An Ogre does by talent what an Obtuse Character does by ineptness — keeps the plot all nicely snarled.

For every Ogre, a soap opera must have its Confessor. The Confessor is the man or woman all the others run crying to when an Obtuse Character or an Ogre messes up their lives. The Confessor performs the narrative duty of allowing those who confess to recapitulate a good deal of plot in case you were out shopping yesterday at program time. The Confessor has a deep, soothing voice (whether male or female) in which he or she often murmurs: "I know what you must be going through." To which the correct answer is: "Do you?"

Never Work

As for "revelance": Another World has blacks in its plot; also rehabilitated convicts. Return to Peyton Place features an ex-drug addict. Recently Somerset dealt with a troubled Vietnam veteran. But mostly relevance is a form of dramatic tokenism, like the neat mod haircuts actors are now permitted.

In the world of soap opera, kitchens gleam but houswives never polish. Men sit at office desks but they never work. Realism has the strictest limits.

The up-to-date look, when it does occur, is apt to be technical. Experimenting with an electronic mix on the soundtrack and sophisticated image-overlay, one soap opera recently visualized a heroine's dream. An Ogre appeared to her out of the spiraling mists. What could be more hip?

But then he spoke. Raising one finger like a road-company version of Banquo's ghost, he intoned: "Forgo present pleasure."

You can hardly get more irrelevant than that. But what soap opera buff would really want it any other way?

Brenda Belting

Once a sweet-voiced child singer, Brenda Lee has gained fame as a gal who can really belt a song. Country Roads and Always on My Mind are two songs that will get her belting treatment when she appears at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 8 as a guest on the CTV variety series The Ian Tyson Show.

WEDNESDAY MOVIES

9:30 a.m.—My Wife's Best Friend (1952 romanticomedy), Anne Baxter, Macdonald Carey. Outdated and poor—4.

4:00 p.m.—The Great Race (1966 old-car comedy, color), Peter Falk, Jack Lemmon. Part one now, part two in 24 hours and both good—5.

Robot Sam, Count von Count Move on to Sesame Street

An overconfident robot named Sam and a compulsive number counter named Count von Count will be added to the Muppets section of the cast when Sesame Street starts a new series of programs on PBS Monday (11:30 a.m. on Channel 9 with repeats at 4 p.m. the same day.)

Big Bird, Cookie Monster, Ernie and Bert plus Oscar the Grouch will be back and will do their individual things again while the robot adds new comedy along with a lesson in machine control and Count von Count specializes in mathematical madness.

The human cast has been reduced to eight from 10 and the eight include two newcomers — folksinger-composer Malvina Reynolds and actor Harold Miller.

The Children's Television Workshop, which produces the popular program, plans 130 new episodes fo the season. In the past season, the show was seen in 50 countries and territories by an estimated 9,000,000 children.

Kissing Had To Stop

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — When, during a tennis game at the Beverly Hills Hotel, Steve McQueen tried to kiss Ali MacGraw, she remonstrated with, "Not in front of the baby!"

The baby to whom she referred is hers by husband Bob Evans, whom she's divorcing.

Meanwhile, Steve's ex-wife, Neile, says she hopes McQueen and MacGraw marry and live happily ever after.

Garson Kanin, who has been a keen student of the book market since his best seller, Tracy and Hepburn, was published last winter, says television has actually helped book sales during the past 20 years.

"Last year," the forceful Kanin told me over coffee at Nate's and Al's delicatessen, "1,580,000,000 books were sold in the United States. People are reading more and more.

"About 25 years ago, the book business was writing its last will and testament, because television had burst upon the scene.

HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE

"But television actually stimulates interest in books."

To make his case, Kanin pointed out that Jacques Cousteau's works enjoyed only a very modest sale until the deep sea expert became a TV personality.

Kanin is delighted that Tracy and Hepburn is now in paperback for philosophical as well as financial reasons.

"The paperback field seems more important to the practice of democracy than the hardback field. Books should be priced within the reach of everybody," Kanin said.

He has just finished a new novel (title not yet announced) which will be out in the spring and has a contract with Viking to produce a book "about the movies."

That was as specific as he'd get about either of his upcoming works.

Cathy had been to Hawaii, but Dean had been at home sick.

While Cornel Wilde was working in the Carlsbad Caverns on Gargoyles, one of The New CBS Tuesday Night Movies, his wife, Jean Wallace, found a tennis partner with whom she won the doubles division of a Carlsbad tennis tournament. The show is about a half-man, half-monster, and, if the network gets lucky, will be aired on Halloween.

THE TITLE of the first Jacques Cousteau special this season is The Smile of the Walrus, and if anyone can see a smile there, they have sharper eyes than we at AbouTV have. The program, on CTV last week, will be seen at 8 p.m. Wednesday on Channel 4 and show how the Pacific walrus has survived the onslaughts of encroaching civilization.

Who's Man in Tit fer Tat?

This picture comes from a series on TV each week, so stop for a minute and try to guess the series. Minute over? The gentleman is George Chisholm and he will be the guest star on the newest episode of the CTV English music series Pig and Whistle at 9:30 p.m. Monday on Channel 8. What other program would dress its guests like that?

Kelly Can Turn Game

He has never played on a Superbowl winner and he loses the headlines to Washington Redskin Larry Brown when it comes to pro football rushers, but Leroy Kelly still can turn a game around with just one run. Kelly should play a prominent role when Cleveland Browns meet the Chargers in San Diego Monday at 7 p.m. on Channel 4.

Robin Hood Idea

Sir L

By ALAN BUNCE

LONDON, England — The big man in British commercial TV may be short, bald and portly, but he does a dazzling Charleston at the drop of a hint.

He is Sir Lew Grade, once billed as "World's Champion Charleston Dancer, now head of the international showbusiness empire known in Britain as ATV.

The very model of a modern tycoon, Sir Lew makes a six-or-seven-million-dollar commitment from a two-page presentation. It took him about 10 minutes to talk TV-resistant Tony Curtis into doing last season's The Persuaders seen in the United States on ABC.

Robin Hood Idea 'Raving Mad'

Sir Lew, British TV Tycoon

By ALAN BUNCE

LONDON, England — The big man in British commercial TV may be short, bald and portly, but he does a dazzling Charleston at the drop of a hint.

He is Sir Lew Grade, once billed as "World's Champion Charleston Dancer, now head of the international show-business empire known in Britain as ATV.

The very model of a modern tycoon, Sir Lew makes a s i x - o r -seven-million-dollar commitment from a two-page presentation. It took him about 10 minutes to talk TV-resistant Tony Curtis into doing last season's The Persuaders seen in the United States on ABC.

Viewers of The Julie Andrews Hour on the same network are probably unaware he is the man behind all that glitter and music. His company has also sent a barrage of syndicated shows into hundreds of American markets — most currently The P r o t e c t o r s , with Robert Vaughn, UFO, The Adventurer, plus specials and summer replacements.

Later this season, Americans will be treated to a national theater production of Eugene O'Neill's Long Day's Journey into Night, with Laurence Olivier as James Tyrone. The Old Vic production will be taped and aired in the United States on ABC-TV.

Waving his giant cigar like a swagger stick, Sir Lew paints a startling picture of his "accidental" launching into the television game.

Great Idea

"One morning I got a phone call from a friend who says, "Lew, have you read the Times? I said, 'I'm an agent, what do I want to read the Times for?' He said, 'Well, there's an advertisement for licenses for television.' . . .

"My associates and I put up a nominal capital of 500,000 pounds ($1.3 million). One day I meet a woman who says, 'I've got a great idea for a series called Robin Hood.' I said, 'That sounds interesting. How much will it cost?' She said, 'Thirty-nine episodes will cost 420,000 pounds' I said, 'Okay, you've got a deal. Go ahead.'

"A few weeks go by. She's making all the plans. Suddenly I thought, 'Perhaps I'd better call a board meeting and let them know what I've done with 420 out of 500 thousand pounds.' I mean, I'd had no experience of big business and they were the 10 most prominent people in this country."

Sir Lew is all innocence as he describes, slyly, his tenderfoot status.

"So we had a board meeting at my agency office on Regency Street and I say, 'We're going to do a series called Robin Hood. 39 episodes.' "

Had he sold it? No, but he thought it was a great idea, he told the board.

" 'Well, you must be raving mad,' they said. 'We've got 500,000 pounds and you spend 420 on this one thing?'

"The chairman said, 'Have you signed an agreement?' I said, 'No, but I've given my word.' Another member said, 'Once Lew has given his word, we have to go through with it.' "

In the end Robin Hood ran for five years. Meanwhile ATV, and a subsidiary called ITC, started putting out other series that became staples of t h e Anglo-American TV scene.

Turned Down

The Saint, for example. Originally all three American networks turned it down because they thought their viewers wouldn't watch action with a British accent. So it was sold directly to local stations and became a hit, even nudging out New York's long reigning movie champ The Late Show. Eventually NBC commissioned a new season of Saint's, creating the unusual situation of a network buying a series after syndication.

But prior to that, Sir Lew had to crack the tough American television market. He did it with Danger Man — known to Americans as Secret Agent — starring Patrick McGoo- strong feelings about suitable family fare run through his talk. "I'm against sex and bad language on the television screen," he asserts. "And I'm against the kind of violence where someone takes a knife and rips someone. But what is wrong with a punch up? The hero always wins. What are you going to do, kiss the fellow on the cheek and say, 'Give me back the gold'?"

How about recent charges that ATV programs are too permissive?

"We produce more programs than any other company," he explains, "And I have to take other contractors' programs where they have nude scenes. But I don't think you should go into a home where there may be children, or you might have friends who would be embarrassed."

Too much talk and too little action is what killed The Persuaders last season, Sir Lew says. "All of us I think, overlooked the fact that what might be amusing dialogue here might not be in Des Moines or Cincinnati. The fact it was a tremendous hit everywhere else in the world is unfortunate."

Bombs appear unlikely to s t o p at ATV empire, as it turns out everything from more National Theatre productions to pedestrian syndicated stuff like Department S, a British show just beginning to sell locally in the United States.

Everything American

Everything on the American scene from fur trappers to devil worship will be shown on the new PBS series Bill Mowers' Journal, sarting at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday on Channel 9. Defeated Liberal Bitter About Racial Prejudice

English-Canadian 'Ashamed'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Bureau

OTTAWA — "I am ashamed of being an English-Canadian."

Murray McBride, clergyman, former Conservative government assistant agricultural representative, and until the Oct. 30 election Liberal MP for the National Capital Region constituency of Lanark-Renfrew-Carlton was speaking.

He had been sitting there in his Centre Block office, which he had to vacate last night, disconsolately tossing files and letters into big cardboard boxes.

"Yes," he said, "you can write that down, please do—I am ashamed and humiliated for being an English-Canadian because in the election they responded from basic racial prejudice against French Canada when the government had only been trying, in the name of national unity, to integrate all Canadians.

Here he paused and glancing impatiently at the newspaperman unhurriedly making notes, snapped, "Here, give me that pen and paper and I'll put it down for you in my own hand."

He did, and this is what he wrote:

"My real concern is that the day following the election there was a real sense of joy among some people that the 'French takeover' had been stopped.

"This is the really sad part of it all. The Liberals failed to appeal to the best instincts of English Canada and let the latent anti-French prejudice carry the day.

"A long rebuilding job is needed to get us going forward again.

"As never before the issue is national unity with the 'Separatists' not all in Quebec."

At this point McBride was interrupted by the question that if he was thinking of trying again in the next election, then wasn't he running the risk of destroying whatever chances he might have by speaking of English-Canadians — including a majority of his constituents—as bigots?

"It was bigotry, pure and simple," he retorted, "and as to whether I will run again, 'no comment.' At the moment let us say I am unemployed.

But was he serious, he was asked, to his claim that French Canada was the only issue?

"Yes," he replied. "And if trying to hide from it, or be dishonest enought to deny it is the price you must pay to be a part of politics, then I don't know . . ."

There was not a single issue other than English Canada wanting, as he put it, "to put down Quebec?" he was asked.

"No other. It was the one overwhelming issue. The unemployment insurance abuses — no factor. The immigra-

Move Under Way

Servants To Join Federation

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — A move is underway to bring the 18,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union into the B.C. Federation of Labor.

If it comes about — and it is fully expected — it would be a major event for the federation since the BCGEU would be second only in size among affiliates to the International Woodworkers of America. The IWA has a B.C. membership of more than 35,000.

The announcement was general secretary John Fryer in an address to the 17th annual convention of the federation.

He said the union's provincial executive has voted unanimously in favor of rejoining the federation. A membership vote on the question is to be conducted early next year.

"I am confident that the vote will be overwhelming in favor of reaffiliation, because our members realize that they owe a great deal to the B.C. Federation of Labor," he said.

The union was in the federation until 1960. Fryer said the Social Credit government "arbitrarily" discontinued payroll checkoff of union dues, a move that forced the BCGEU to leave the federation.

The reason given by the government for cancellation of dues checkoff, Fryer said, was the union's affiliation with the large labor body and the policy of supporting the NDP.

The checkoff system was restored six years later.

The union has remained an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress and its pre-

Israelis, Syrians Fire Away

Syria and Israel Thursday fought with jets, tanks and artillery along the entire length of their border in the fiercest battle since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect 27 months ago.

Military spokesmen in Damascus said Syrians shot down four Israeli planes and lost two of their own. At least two of the Israeli crews went down with their planes, spokesmen said.

Tel Aviv spokesmen denied any aircraft were lost or even hit but said Israeli pilots downed two Syrian MiG-21s. They said one soldier and two civilians were wounded in a three-hour artillery duel with Syrian guns.

A senior Israeli officer said between 2,000 and 3,000 rounds of high explosive shells impacted on Israeli positions on a 25-mile front.

Both sides agreed that the fighting began with an early-afternoon Israeli aerial attack on two Syrian positions. It ended at dusk with what an Israeli officer called a tense quiet along the front.

During the peace interlude an Israeli officer said "the Syrians must ask themselves what they may suffer tomorrow if they continue to let the terrorists cross their border."

Israeli spokesmen said Arab guerrillas passed through the two attacked positions en route to fights in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights.

The attacking Israeli planes killed one soldier and wounded two others, spokesmen in Damascus said.

A Syrian spokesman said: "In retaliation to the Israeli attack at noon today on our frontline positions, our heavy artillery opened fire at 3 p.m."

The Israeli guns returned the fire.

Syrian spokesmen said the artillery was joined by firing from tank-mounted guns and the shooting spread up and down the entire Syrian-Israeli border.

New Saigon Talks Key to Ceasefire

SAIGON (UPI) — White House emissary Gen. Alexander Haig Friday began crucial talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu which may determine the fate of a proposed ceasefire agreement.

Haig's talks with Thieu began about 11 a.m. at the presidential palace. It was Haig's ninth visit to Saigon and the second in about a month.

Thieu has been openly critical of the proposed truce agreement Henry Kissinger negotiated with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho in secret meetings in Paris.

In Paris, North Vietnam said Thursday there no longer can be an early peace in Vietnam, but the United States said it expects an agreement soon at the next meeting between negotiator Kissinger and Hanoi officials.

"Peace is not for tomorrow," said North Vietnam's negotiator, Nguyen Minh Vy, after the 166th session of the peace talks.

"The reason is simple. The United States refused to sign the peace agreement it has already agreed to."

The U.S. delegation was more optimistic after the regular talks session, which lasted a comparatively brief four hours.

"With every passing day, peace comes perceptibly nearer," Porter said.

New Labor Laws Will Require Eighteen Months

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Staff

It will likely be at least 18 months and possibly two years before new B.C. labor laws are presented to the legislature, Labor Minister William King said Thursday.

King gave the assessment which contradicts earlier indications that a full-scale revision of the province's labor legislation might be dealt with by the next spring session—at a news conference called Thursday afternoon to announce Nov. 20 as the date on which the controversial B.C. Mediation Commission will cease to function.

On that date, when the new Mediation Services Act approved at a special session last month comes into effect, the three commissioners — chairman John Parker, Pen Baskin and Alistair Pollock—will leave those posts.

King confirmed he has met three times with the commissioners to discuss the terms of settlement for their dismissal but he refused to discuss details until agreement is reached. Parker was hired in 1968 at a salary of $42,500 a year and the other two members at $40,000 each.

The minister added despite reports that the commissioners were given a seven-year contract beginning in 1968 he felt the government

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (CP) — Canada's first domestic communications satellite, Anik — Eskimo for "brother" — roared into orbit atop a Delta rocket Thursday night in the first stage of a plan to bring space-age communications to the Canadian North.

Erroneous indications of trouble in the launch vehicle and in the guidance system of the satellite delayed the launch, originally scheduled for 3:20 p.m. PST.

Two Ottawa Grants Killed by Kickbacks

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal regional expansion department has cancelled two incentive grants because it has determined that an unidentified government employee received kickbacks from the companies who were to have received the money.

The grants — one of $617,000 toward a silver refinery and the other of $119,000 toward construction of a commercial mint — had been accepted by Silver Shields Mines Inc., and the Jacques Cartier Mint Inc.

They were to have supported construction of a complex in Cobalt, Ont.

Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand said in a news release Wednesday:

"An investigation of circumstances surrounding the decisions to make the two incentive offers had led to the conclusion that an officer in a responsible position in the department (who is no longer employed by the department) had been offered and received improper benefits from a person or persons associated with the companies."

Best Seller Concludes:

Men Slaves, Women Exploiters

LONDON (AP) — The American male is the most oppressed man in the Western world, says the author of a book that also argues men are really slaves and women their exploiters.

Esther Vilar, author of The Manipulated Man, also thinks that women are stupid and getting more so every day; that men are brilliant but locked into stultifying jobs; that housework is a pleasure and men are deprived of it and that all of this stems from mothers who condition their children into manipulative and slave roles.

The book was originally published in West Germany where it made the best-seller list before it was launched in other countries.

In London, novelist Kingsley Amis called it "total twaddle" and one reviewer wrote "to know her is to hate her." But others praised the book as the best argument yet against women's lib.

Basically her theory is that the male is brilliant and capable of doing great things with his freedom but his intelligent thoughts frighten him. He seeks the security of the enslaved and marries.

"In no other country do mothers so pitilessly train the male infant to perform," Miss Vilar says. "No other society exists where the male sexual drive is exploited for money so unscrupulously."

Girls, though born intelligent, Miss Vilar says, are taught they don't have to think because men are going to work for them. Their goal is to find a man to do this.

Miss Vilar, 37, was born in Argentina of German parents who were divorced when she was three years old.

After graduating from medical school she practised for one year, then studied psychology and sociology and became a sales representative for a pharmaceutical company so she could support her writing career.

In 1961, she married Klaus Wagn, a German writer. They were divorced two years later after the birth of a son, Martin, now nine. Miss Vilar says her former husband is still the most important man in her life. When she is away publicizing her books, he lives in her home to care for their son.

Logging Firms Fined

Two Vancouver Island logging firms have been fined $500 each for failing to comply with slash burning regulations.

In making the announcement Thursday, deputy minister of forests John Stokes said the charges had been laid against Tahsis Co. Ltd., and the Newcon Logging Company. Both operate in the Gold River area, west of Campbell River on Vancouver Island. Fines were imposed following a court hearing held in Campbell River Wednesday.

Forest Service officials said a slash burning fire in the Gold River region in mid-September had escaped and burned "at least 150 acres" more than had been scheduled. The offending firms had not taken adequate precautions to prevent the slash fire from spreading.

Four similar charges, involving escaped slash fires in the same area, and other logging firms, are slated for court action within the near future.

B.C. Fishermen's Union At Do-or-Die Stage

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — "We've been out in the rain for a long time now. But I guess that's okay — we've got our slickers."

The remark was made with a smile in a hotel hallway here Thursday by Homer Stevens. The tall, soft-spoken veteran of many labor struggles may have had reason to feel the day was approaching when he would lead his fishermen's union out of the rain and into the house of labor.

A few minutes earlier the 600 delegates to the B.C. Federation of Labor convention had united strongly behind the latest effort of their executive officers to win re-affiliation in the Canadian Labor Congress for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

Danger Point

The long, frustrating battle to return the fishermen almost reached the do-or-die stage at this year's convention. It has been the overriding piece of business almost since the five-day convention started Monday. The seeming danger point lay in an International Woodworkers of America resolution calling for immediate seating of the fishermen at the present session.

This would have been in defiance of the CLC, which ousted the fishermen in the Red-baiting days of the 1950s for political leanings. Thursday, federation president George Johnston reaffirmed that the resolution was unconstitutional because of this and ruled it out of order.

And Al Staley of Victoria, a former president of the federation and a current member of the CLC executive council, said Thursday he would work to have the dictates of the policy carried out.

If the fishermen are re-instated it would have to be by some other means than merger with the big Amalgamated Meatcutters, a proposal they rejected earlier. Merger of unions considered to be in the same field is CLC policy of entry. Some exceptions can be made.

Stevens, who sat in during sessions of the convention as an observer, said in the hallway interview that he hoped the CLC would finally "get the message."

"If they don't they're going to be treading on touchy ground," he said in reference to the mood of the federation.

Stevens thinks the decision of all delegates to unite behind the policy statement and not push the controversial resolution is all that prevented a serious split in the convention.

"I last addressed the federation as a member in 1953," he said.

"The CLC suspended us in 1953 and expelled us in 1954."

Mill Bay Residents Say Lift 'Freeze'

DUNCAN — The proposed subdivision bylaw for the Mill Bay electoral area has brought criticism, directors of the Cowichan Valley Regional Board learned Wednesday.

Former regional director, H. A. Warner presented the board with a petition which contained the names of 22 per cent of the 760 electors and two resident electors "to lift the freeze you have placed on our area, as you have created a severe hardship on the people who have spent a great deal of money after being given tentative approval from the highways department."

"Nobody can move in our area and I request you to take immediate action. I contacted 153 ratepayers but I can get many more names. We are entitled to some action," Warner said."

President of Mill Bay Estates Ltd., W. F. Norie advised the board in a letter that his firm has a subdivision in progress with clearing, surveying, construction of main and access roads and water main and service to each lot completed. He said the blacktopping was arranged when the area was closed. His firm asked for exemption from the "freeze".

In general terms we are opposed to the change in the regulations as we feel that they were ill-conceived and hastily applied. Evidently a large land developer who buys up a big area of land will be able to subdivide by installing all facilities and thus reduce his lot size.

This is one more example of regulations of governing bodies playing into the hands of big business, as the small land owner cannot possibly undertake to do this. As he will be unable to accomplish the subdivision himself, or afford indefinitely to pay the taxes on the total of his property he will be a wonderful target for the large developer to buy up his property at a very reasonable price, Norie stated.

Regional board chairman Bill Wyllie promised Warner and his small delegation prompt action and the petition was referred to the area's advisory planning commission which will hold a meeting soon, according to Mill Bay director Ralph Kier.

Regarding the Hagar property in the Cowichan Bay flats area the board decided that at this time that property should not be considered as a public park but an application will go Victoria asking the provincial government that the land be preserved under the green belt protection act.

The Hagar property moved into the limelight when the proposal of establishing a shake and shingle mill came before the board which eventually decided not to rezone that area to allow the development of further industry.

In other business the regional board decided to table a motion from the regional planning committee. The motion proposed to ask the provincial government's technical planning committee to advice the regional board on regional water resources.

Boys Held by RCMP After Two Cars Stolen

NANAIMO — Two juvenile boys were in RCMP cells here late Thursday after they were apprehended in connection with a number of incidents across the province.

The boys, aged 14 and 15, are said to have been part of a group of four juveniles responsible for a series of incidents which began in Nanaimo several weeks ago.

Police said the group stole a car in Nanaimo and went to Victoria. There, they are said to have panhandled enough money to get them and the stolen car to Vancouver and eventually as far as 70 Mile House on the Cariboo highway.

Near 70 Mile House, the stolen car was involved in a single car accident. The quartet then hitchhiked to Cache Creek where the theft of another vehicle was reported.

Police then traced the group's movements to Kamloops where the boys were said to be involved with police in a high speed chase through streets of that city. Two of the youths were apprehended in Kamloops but two others escaped on foot.

Another car was stolen in Kamloops and the two remaining youths are said to have driven to Valemont, where a service station was broken into.

The next ports of call were Fernie and Creston. Another service station was broken into at Creston.

The boys were then traced to Vancouver and to Courtenay where another service station was entered.

Police said they recovered a quantity of tools, car accessories, cigarettes and clothing from the stolen 1972 car in which the pair were found.

The juveniles were lodged in cells and the car was impounded.

Lower Income Boost Needed

Hold Prices—Douglas

NANAIMO — Former national NDP leader Tommy Douglas, Thursday called for immediate implementation of the recommendations of the Economic Council of Canada.

The council brought down a series of recommendations aimed at stimulating the economy and reducing unemployment to 4.5 per cent by 1975.

"Basically what they are saying is that we should hold the line on prices while we increase income, particularly in the middle and lower income groups," Douglas said.

He said this formula formed the basis of the NDP platform during the recent federal election.

Douglas
. . . create jobs

"The present government's formula, of pouring money in at the top in the form of concession to corporations, hoping a little will trickle down, will never work.

"We say increased wages at the bottom and in the middle will stimulate the economy — allow people to buy houses, goods and services and, in this way, create jobs and make people generally happier," Douglas said.

He said the recommendations should be put into force at the earliest possible time.

Special Meeting

It was replaced by a fairly strong policy statement from the executive officers and resolutions committee calling for a decision next month from the CLC executive council to re-instate the fishermen failing that, the federation will call a special meeting of its own executive council "to consider all possible courses for action to carry out the wishes of this convention."

While support of this move was unanimous, it was pointed out from the floor that there was no real action the federation could take, short of something that might get it in trouble with the CLC.

Risk Expulsion

Such extremes, of course, are highly unlikely, although more than one delegate has suggested that the federation should risk expulsion by taking the fishermen back into the fold.

The federation's officers appear optimistic that the 30-man CLC executive council will rule in favor of the fishermen when it meets in Ottawa Dec. 5 to 7. CLC executive vice-president Bill Dodge hinted at this during a somewhat stormy session with federation delegates earlier this week.

Three Ways for Getting Swim Pool in Courtenay

By RUTH McKELLAR
Colonist Correspondent

COURTENAY — A proposed indoor swimming pool in Courtenay would probably show an estimated annual operational deficit of $20,000, "met on a tax basis from the city and the regional district on an appropriate share basis," according to proponents of the plan.

The indoor swim pool committee presented the proposal, with three financial approaches, to city council this week.

The committee calls for the pool to be built at the Courtenay recreational grounds at an estimated cost of $340,000. It was later admittted that the costs were only estimates as the committee did not wish to hire architects to design plans if the project could not proceed.

In a written brief to council the committee pointed out that the pool would probably get use 10 months of the year by a "wide range of age groups — and is likely to attract support from a large proportion of taxpayers."

Charles Pearce speaking for the pool committee, which has been working on the project for 10 years, said he favored "proposal one" which would see $145,000 of the total cost provided by the city over a 20 year period at a cost of about .9 mills per year or a total capital cost of some 1.14 mills.

Another $145,000 would come from the Comox-Strathcona regional district at an estimated cost of .24 mills per year and the remaining $50,000 to be raised by the pool committee. Approximately $25,000 is already in the hands of the pool committee.

The second proposal narrows down the area of the regional district which would share the cost and raises the estimated cost by twice as much and eliminates the city in a direct way, from the plan. The sum of $290,000 would be provided by the regional board from the area of school district 71 at a cost of about .48 mills and $50,000 would be raised by the pool committee.

School district 71 includes the municipalities of Courtenay, Comox and Cumberland and rural areas from Oyster River on the north to Fanny Bay on the south. While the city of Courtenay would not be paying part of the cost directly, it would however be paying indirecty through increased assessment to the regional district.

The committee outlined how the deficit would be covered by saying "It is considered that in view of the fact that a pool will in effect be a regional facility it should be substantially financed by the regional district. Estimated cost to the city of Courtenay approximately .4 mills, some financial assistance considered possible from DND if the pool is made available to service personnel."

Excluding the possibility of DND help and the .4 mills from Courtenay, the remaining deficit would again come from the pockets of the remaining municipalities and rural areas of the school district.

The pool is seen as being 25 metres by 30 feet, 3½ to 12 feet in depth, equipped with one and three metres diving boards. It would also have starting blocks, false start rope, back stroke rope and four racing lanes. "Provincial and national meet could not be held here as we would require at least six lanes" and a wider pool.

Herb Bradley, chairman of the planning, construction and design committee said in concluding his presentation, "We are of the opinion that if an indoor pool is built, no matter who builds it, where it is built, who pays for it, how charges are made etc., it will still be used by a vast majority of people in school district 71."

In response to questions from aldrmen, the committee members admitted that no decision had been made on charges and the estimated budget deficit, was actually based on deficits from other pools in the province. It was also pointed out that a deficit would be expected if the arena is built.

Ald. Gordon Wagner, city representative on the regional board, said it was expected firm costs for the proposed arena would be available in two weeks and a referendum would likely be put in January or early February. He said the pool project was next on the list in regional recreation priorities, but the regional recreation committee felt there was more interest at this time in an arena as opposed to a pool.

Wagner also took issue with the regional recreation committee which he claimed worked with some lack of communication. He suggested on at least two occassions that the committee meetings should have been open to the public.

Ald. Bob McPhee favored a vote for a pool and an arena, while Mayor Bill Moore expressed grave concern over the timing of any referendum for a pool at this time.

Moore claimed there was a possibility of dividing the community but admitted "If a pool is to be got, Courtenay will have to give the leadership."

Aldermen decided not to do battle with the issue this week and called a special meeting for Nov. 15.

If the outfall is built with a treatment plant, sewage would be collected from Parksville, Qualicum Beach and points further up the coast and taken down to Madrona Point.

Mayor Charles Darkis said that nobody is sure, at present, whether or not Qualicum Beach and Parksville are interested in this proposed sewage system. He hopes to find out Qualicum Beach residents' wishes in December.

Council approved Alderman Bruce Brown's motion to inform the Greater Nanaimo regional sewer authority that the council would have an interest in the survey at Madrona Point being made, on the understanding that the village is not committing itself to the installation of a trunk sewer line.

It was stated that there would be little point in making the study if neither Parksville nor Qualicum were interested.

If the proposals set forth in the Nanaimo regional district's recently published sewer report are implemented, there would be a trunk line up the coast from Madrona Point. Qualicum Beach and Parksville would be responsible for collecting sewage in their own boundaries and this would flow into the trunk line.

The village council will send out a circular letter to the residents giving them information on sewage for the community including costs to individuals home owners. They will be asked to indicate whether or not they are interested in having a system installed. This is not a referendum or plebisite.

Dr. P. J. Reynolds, head of the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, and the chief Health Inspector will meet with the council to discuss the sewage problem at the Shady Rest Hotel on the beach at Qualicum. Ald. Pat Sullivan said that there is a pretty bad situation there.

Alf Walz, application made at the last council meeting, to erect two hangars at the air port was rejected by aldermen at the Monday evening meeting. Walz wanted to install a saw mill in one and use the other to store boats during the winter.

Vern Huntley, a member of the Parksville Qualicum Aero Club, proposed that the name of the Qualicum Airport be changed to Air Park because it appears that it will be used mainly for recreation. The new name would also squelch the thought that the facility would become a noisy airport, which will not happen, stated Huntley. Aldermen are considering the suggested name change.

There are still three tall trees near one end of the airstrip which are preventing the licensing of the airport. Aldermen considered making an offer of $1,000 to the owner for their removal or topping.

Defeated Liberal Bitter About Racial Prejudice

English-Canadian 'Ashamed'

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Bureau

OTTAWA — "I am ashamed of being an English-Canadian."

Murray McBride, clergyman, former Conservative government assistant agricultural representative, and until the Oct. 30 election Liberal MP for the National Capital Region constituency of Lanark-Renfrew-Carlton was speaking.

He had been sitting there in his Centre Block office, which he had to vacate last night, disconsolately tossing files and letters into big cardboard boxes.

"Yes," he said, "you can write that down, please do—I am ashamed and humiliated for being an English-Canadian because in the election they responded from basic racial prejudice against French-Canada when the government had only been trying, in the name of national unity, to integrate all Canadians.

Here he paused and glancing impatiently at the newspaperman unhurriedly making notes, snapped, "Here, give me that pen and paper and I'll put it down for you in my own hand."

He did, and this is what he wrote:

"My real concern is that the day following the election there was a real sense of joy among some people that the 'French takeover' had been stopped.

"This is the really sad part of it all. The Liberals failed to appeal to the best instincts of English Canada and let the latent anti-French prejudice carry the day.

"A long rebuilding job is needed to get us going forward again.

"As never before the issue is national unity with the 'Separatists' not all in Quebec."

At this point McBride was interrupted by the question that if he was thinking of trying again in the next election, then wasn't he running the risk of destroying whatever chances he might have by speaking of English-Canadians — including a majority of his constituents—as bigots?

"It was bigotry, pure and simple," he retorted, "and as to whether I will run again, 'no comment.' At the moment let us say I am unemployed."

But was he serious, he was asked, to his claim that French-Canada was the only issue?

"Yes," he replied. "And if trying to hide from it, or be dishonest enought to deny it is the price you must pay to be a part of politics, then I don't know . . ."

There was not a single issue other than English Canada wanting, as he put it, "to put down Quebec?" he was asked.

"No other. It was the one overwhelming issue. The unemployment insurance abuses — no factor. The immigra-

Move Under Way

Servants To Join Federation

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

VANCOUVER — A move is underway to bring the 18,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union into the B.C. Federation of Labor.

If it comes about — and it is fully expected — it would be a major event for the federation since the BCGEU would be second only in size among affiliates to the International Woodworkers of America. The IWA has a B.C. membership of more than 35,000.

The federation covers 175,000 unionists, up from about 151,000 in a year.

The announcement was made by general secretary John Fryer in an address to the 17th annual convention of the federation.

He said the union's provincial executive has voted unanimously in favor of rejoining the federation. A membership vote on the question is to be conducted early next year.

"I am confident that the vote will be overwhelming in favor of reaffiliation, because our members realize that they owe a great deal to the B.C. Federation of Labor," he said.

The union was in the federation until 1960. Fryer said the Social Credit government "arbitrarily" discontinued payroll checkoff of union dues, a move that forced the BCGEU to leave the federation.

The reason given by the government for cancellation of dues checkoff, Fryer said, was the union's affiliation with the large labor body and the policy of supporting the NDP.

The checkoff system was restored six years later.

The union has remained an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress and its pre-

Israelis, Syrians Fire Away

From UPI

Syria and Israel Thursday fought with jets, tanks and artillery along the entire length of their border in the fiercest battle since the Middle East ceasefire went into effect 27 months ago.

Military spokesmen in Damascus said Syrians shot down four Israeli planes and lost two of their own. At least two of the Israeli crews went down with their planes, spokesmen said.

Tel Aviv spokesmen denied any aircraft were lost or even hit but said Israeli pilots downed two Syrian MiG-21s. They said one soldier and two civilians were wounded in a three-hour artillery duel with Syrian guns.

A senior Israeli officer said between 2,000 and 3,000 rounds of high explosive shells impacted on Israeli positions on a 25-mile front.

Both sides agreed that the fighting began with an early-afternoon Israeli aerial attack on two Syrian positions. It ended at dusk with what an Israeli officer called a tense quiet along the front.

During the peace interlude an Israeli officer said "the Syrians must ask themselves what they may suffer tomorrow if they continue to let the terrorists cross their border."

Israeli spokesmen said Arab guerrillas passed through the two attacked positions en route to fights in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights.

The attacking Israeli planes killed one soldier and wounded two others, spokesmen in Damascus said.

A Syrian spokesman said: "In retaliation to the Israeli attack at noon today on our frontline positions, our heavy artillery opened fire at 3 p.m."

The Israeli guns returned the fire.

Syrian spokesmen said the artillery was joined by firing from tank-mounted guns and the shooting spread up and down the entire Syrian-Israeli border.

Jobs Goal Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada set up 15 economic performance goals for Canada Thursday and one of them — cutting unemployment to 4.5 per cent of the labor force in 1975 — was immediately described as perhaps too difficult to achieve.

Dr. Andre Raynauld, chairman of the council, told a news conference the unemployment goal was set on the understanding that unemployment this year would run to about 5.6 per cent of the labor force.

Experience already has shown this to be too low. Unemployment in the first 10 months of the year averaged 6.3 per cent. Raynauld said this makes the goal for 1975 more difficult to achieve, and "it may perhaps be delayed a little."

The economic council says governments should hold the line on taxes in the next three years and perhaps even reduce them.

It also says the country can expand its tax-supported wel-

New Saigon Talks Key to Ceasefire

SAIGON (UPI) — White House emissary Gen. Alexander Haig today began crucial talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu which may determine the fate of a proposed ceasefire agreement.

Haig's talks with Thieu began about 11 a.m. at the presidential palace. It was Haig's ninth visit to Saigon and the second in about a month.

Thieu has been openly critical of the proposed truce agreement Henry Kissinger negotiated with North Vietnam's Le Duc Tho in secret meetings in Paris.

In Paris, North Vietnam said Thursday there no longer can be an early peace in Vietnam, but the United States said it expects an agreement soon at the next meeting between negotiator Kissinger and Hanoi officials.

"Peace is not for tomorrow," said North Vietnam's negotiator, Nguyen Minh Vy, after the 166th session of the peace talks.

"The reason is simple. The United States refused to sign the peace agreement it has already agreed to."

The U.S. delegation was more optimistic after the regular talks session, which lasted a comparatively brief four hours.

"With every passing day, peace comes perceptibly nearer," Porter said.

New Labor Laws Will Require Eighteen Months

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Staff

It will likely be at least 18 months and possibly two years before new B.C. labor laws are presented to the Legislature, Labor Minister William King said Thursday.

King gave the assessment which contradicts earlier indications that a full-scale revision of the province's labor legislation might be dealt with by the next spring session—at a news conference called Thursday afternoon to announce Nov. 20 as the date on which the controversial B.C. Mediation Commission will cease to function.

On that date, when the new Mediation Services Act approved at a special session last month comes into effect, the three commissioners — chairman John Parker, Pen Baskin and Alistair Pollock— will leave those posts.

King confirmed he has met three times with the commissioners to discuss the terms of settlement for their dismissal but he refused to discuss details until agreement is reached. Parker was hired in 1968 at a salary of $42,500 a year and the other two members at $40,000 each.

The minister added despite reports that the commissioners were given a seven-year contract beginning in 1968 he felt the government

Two Ottawa Grants Killed by Kickbacks

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal regional expansion department has cancelled two incentive grants because it has determined that an unidentified government employee received kickbacks from the companies who were to have received the money.

The grants — one of $617,000 toward a silver refinery and the other of $119,000 toward construction of a commercial mint — had been accepted by Silver Shields Mines Inc., and the Jacques Cartier Mint Inc.

They were to have supported construction of a complex in Cobalt, Ont.

Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand said in a news release Wednesday:

"An investigation of circumstances surrounding the decisions to make the two incentive offers had led to the conclusion that an officer in a responsible position in the department (who is no longer employed by the department) had been offered and received improper benefits from a person or persons associated with the companies."

Best Seller Concludes:

Men Slaves, Women Exploiters

LONDON (AP) — The American male is the most oppressed man in the Western world, says the author of a book that also argues men are really slaves and women their exploiters.

Esther Vilar, author of The Manipulated Man, also thinks that women are stupid and getting more so every day; that men are brilliant but locked into stultifying jobs; that housework is a pleasure and men are deprived of it and that all of this stems from mothers who condition their children into manipulative and slave roles.

The book was originally published in West Germany where it made the best-seller list before it was launched in other countries.

In London, novelist Kingsley Amis called it "total twaddle" and one reviewer wrote "to know her is to hate her." But others praised the book as the best argument yet against women's lib.

Basically her theory is that the male is brilliant and capable of doing great things with his freedom but his intelligent thoughts frighten him. He seeks the security of the enslaved and marries.

"In no other country do mothers so pitilessly train the male infant to perform," Miss Vilar says. "No other society exists where the male sexual drive is exploited for money so unscrupulously."

Girls, though born intelligent, Miss Vilar says, are taught they don't have to think because men are going to work for them. Their goal is to find a man to do this.

Miss Vilar, 37, was born in Argentina of German parents who were divorced when she was three years old.

After graduating from medical school she practised for one year; then studied psychology and sociology and became a sales representative for a pharmaceutical company so she could support her writing career.

In 1961, she married Klaus Wagn, a German writer. They were divorced two years later after the birth of a son, Martin, now nine. Miss Vilar says her former husband is still the most important man in her life. When she is away publicizing her books, he lives in her home to care for their son.

Pedestrian Week Stresses Cs

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

Big Xs painted on Victoria street surfaces are NOT crosswalks. But try to convince some Greater Victoria pedestrians!

This is just one of the factors which pedestrians and car drivers alike should keep in mind all the time — but especially next week.

That period, from Monday to Nov. 19, has been designated by the Capital Region's safety council as Pedestrian Safety Week—1972.

It is the hope of John Reeves, the council's general manager, that for the coming week, and all the weeks to come, people on foot and in cars alike will observe the Three Cs of safety: Courtesy, Care, Consideration.

If they do, they will also save lives.

Stand on any street corner in downtown Victoria during a normal work day (it's worse in rush hours) and count the number of times one, two or all three of the Cs are ignored.

All that Reeves and the council which covers Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich, Esquimalt, Central Saanich, Sidney, Colwood-Langford and Sooke ask people to do is to share the roads "in a reasonable and civilized manner."

"Both drivers and pedestrians have a road-sharing responsibility, but . . . the driver of the steel-bodied vehicle has the greater responsibility to avoid contact with the frail pedestrian," says a council statment.

Motorists are urged in the statement to use extra caution where children or elderly pedestrians are concerned, and drivers are reminded they must yield to pedestrians in marked or unmarked crosswalks not controlled by signs or signals.

However, the council said pedestrians must not step onto a street when it is obvious the car cannot stop in time, and pointed out that, at night, a pedestrian can spot a car more quickly than the driver can see the pedestrian.

Oh, yes — about those big Xs on the road. They're painted, for example, on both Fort and Yates streets, in each traffic lane, to warn car drivers there is a crosswalk ahead—an arrow farther along emphasizes the warning.

During a very few minutes Thursday a handful of walkers was seen to turn to the curb by these Xs, look down the street for cars, then stride confidently across the centre of the Xs to the opposite side.

This may have been closer to where they were headed — but it was some distance from the real crosswalk and a very long way from safety.

The safety council asked persons to remember that the elderly are the most frequent pedestrian traffic victims. About two-thirds of fatalities and injuries occur during the day in good weather and from 3 to 5 p.m. is the most hazardous time of day.

The statement asked parents, who drive their children to school, to refrain from such dangerous practices as double parking, unloading their children in mid-block on the opposite side of the street from the school and stopping atop or too close to a crosswalk.

And, the statement said, parents should drive their children to school only when necessary, rides should be pooled among neighbors and caution should be used when approaching or leaving a school in a car.

Of all pedestrian fatalities, 35 per cent occur in October, November and December.

During 1971 in the Capital Region, seven pedestrians were killed and 158 injured. Of the fatalities, five were in Victoria and two in Saanich.

To date this year four have been killed, 101 injured, with three fatalities in Victoria and one in Central Saanich.

The Canadian average every year is 600 pedestrians killed — 10 per cent of all traffic deaths — and 16,000 injured.

Here is the record for the last three Pedestrian Safety Weeks in the Capital Region: 1969: one killed; 1970: four injured; 1971: two injured.

It's improving, Reeves feels. Perhaps this year, with everyone exercising courtesy, care and common sense, the record may be kept completely clean.

Teachers Tossed Pay 'Ball'

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Two Greater Victoria school trustees tossed the ball firmly back into the teachers' court Thursday night as far as salary negotiations between the two groups are concerned.

Acting board chairman Hal Knight declined to make any public statement after the board held an unexpected meeting at 5:30 p.m. Thursday to discuss the progess of negotiations, but negotiating committee chairman Walter Donald and veteran trustee Peter Bunn, speaking only as individual trustees, levelled harsh criticism against the teachers in the current round of negotiations.

Limits Removed

"When the NDP government removed the limitations on teachers' salary increases, they said the teachers would be responsible in their demands and negotiations. I don't think they have been being responsible. That's what really burns me up," said Bunn.

Bunn and Donald challenged the teachers to use some of the money they would get by pushing their salary demands to the limit to improve educational quality in the district, especially to hire more teachers.

In its provisional budget passed earlier this week, the board alloted a total of costs of fringe benefits and salaries, an increase of 13.3 per cent over 1972.

This increase of about $2.1 million, it was explained, would cover salary increases, costs of fringe benefits and salaries for all new teachers hired by the district during 1973.

How much of the increase will go to each of the three categories is up to the teachers, said Donald.

If the teachers insist on pushing for the same sort of settlements that have been negotiated in the two Lower Mainland districts that have settled, and if they get that sort of settlement, there will be very little left over for the hiring of new teachers, Donald said.

The Lower mainland settlements, in Surrey and Burnaby, have been in the area of 9 per cent.

A 9 per cent increase locally would mean that $1.4 million of the $2.1 million would go to salary increases for present teachers leaving only $700,000 for all fringe benefits for all teachers and for hiring new teachers.

New Teachers

But if the teachers would settle for an increase of 7.5 per cent, an extra $240,000 would be available for further new teachers.

At an average salary of between $10,000 and $11,000 each, that extra $240,000 could provide more than 20 extra teachers to the district. Aim of hiring more teachers would be to reduce average class size, a matter which has been of considerable concern to trustees.

The teachers have been asking in negotiations for an increase of about 12.3 per cent, and Knight said the board's first offer had been 6.5 per cent — the recommended guideline that had been set provincially in 1972.

No Statement

Donald said no statement could be made regarding specifics of negotiations at the moment because the talks were "at a crucial stage."

If agreement is not reached before Tuesday, the district and the teachers' association must apply for arbitration, although they are free to continue negotiating on their own for a settlement up to Dec. 31.

Donald said what he was looking for was "a fair, reasonable settlement for the teachers which won't hamper education quality in the district." And a settlement that didn't allow the class sizes to be reduced would not fit that definition, he said.

Fair Increase

Basically, he felt a fair settlement would be one equal to the yearly increase in the cost of living, in this case less than 5 per cent.

Bunn said he felt that if the board got some of the other things it was looking for in negotiations, a settlement as high as 7.5 per cent would be acceptable.

But what he would really like to see, he said, was the teachers' agreeing to a 7.5 increase provided the board would spend the equivalent of an extra 1 per cent on hiring new teachers. Both he and Donald were convinced the board would agree to such a condition.

Unique Move

A settlement like that, he said, would form a unique precedent which would raise the image of teachers very much among the parents and taxpayers of the district.

But neither of the two were optimistic that teachers could be persuaded to agree to a 7.5 per cent increase in light of other increases around the province.

If other boards had insisted on lower increases it might be possible for Greater Victoria to follow suit, but with the 9 per cent settlements elsewhere, it was not likely the district could keep its increases as low as it would wish, said Donald.

"Anyway, the ball's in their court now," he said. "And we're waiting for an answer."

City Initiates Steps To End Stalemate

By HUBERT BEYER

Victoria city council initiated steps Thursday that may form the basis for a settlement with Victoria developer J. A. Mace over the controversial Bay Village shopping centre.

Basis for the attempted settlement will be a compromise to which both Mace and the city agreed last June.

That compromise calls for construction of a 24-storey highrise and a reduction of the project's overall density. The developer's original plans were for construction of a 29-storey tower with a higher density.

Plans for a shopping centre will remain unaffected. The entire development is to be built at Menzies and Simcoe in James Bay.

Although the two parties had agreed on the compromise last June, they failed to reach final settlement because of several technicalities.

Mace at that time insisted that the compromise be written into his original land-use contract with the city; failing that, he wanted city council's assurance that the city would sign a second land-use contract if he were to submit it.

The city rejected both requests. Council invited Mace to abandon his original contract, which had already been approved by the previous council, and submit an application for a new contract with no assurance of approval on the part of the city.

When the two sides reached a deadlock last June, Mace proceeded with legal action against the city. He sued the city for unspecified damages incurred as a result of the delay. He also insisted that the city sign the original contract. That contract was approved by the previous council, but never signed by the city.

At the moment, the city is several days overdue in filing its statement of defence.

To overcome the apparent difficulties, city council decided Thursday to hold a public hearing at which aldermen will discuss a land-use contract based on the compromise.

There are a number of somewhat unique aspects involved in the city's move to reopen the lines of communication with the developer.

First, Mace isn't expected to be at the public hearing. Second, the land-use contract before council will have been prepared by the city and not by the developer.

There will also be no bylaw prepared for the contract prior to the public hearing.

Central Saanich's Cable Bid Backed

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen Thursday night backed a Central Saanich council bid made earlier this week for private cablevision companies to submit any expansion plans for council scrutiny before receiving Canadian Radio Television Commission approval.

Last Monday the Saanich Peninsula council unanimously approved the resolution for a municipality's council to check out any proposed plan for cablevision extensions in the municipality before it goes before the CRTC.

The bid was brought to council by Ald. Ted Clayards, who explained in an interview Thursday "this is merely to insure a fair distribution of TV cablevision service to all parts of a municipality."

The resolution will be sent to the provincial secretary and the CRTC chairman.

Clayards said this would stop any possible "cream-off" policy of a cablevision company in serving only heavily populated areas of a municipality and bypassing the more scarcely settled parts.

He said he realized that to bring cablevision into an area was expensive. "But a company should be able to take the good with the bad and service a complete area, not just those parts which will give the best returns."

Pollen said the move by Central Saanich reinforces his argument that the CRTC is "protecting and assisting" the business operation of cablevision companies rather than the users.

He also claimed the transport commission was doing the same for the telephone companies.

He said both commissions should be investigated so their policies could be revamped.

South Africa Cleric Hails Barnes' Move

By NANCY BROWN

Action such as that taken by NDP MLA Emery Barnes in refusing to open a tennis tournament because of participation by South Africans is a great help to those South Africans opposed to apartheid, says Rev. Gonville french-Beytagh, former Anglican Dean of Johannesburg.

"The average South African doesn't have much brain but likes using it," said the canon Thursday during a visit to Victoria.

"If you touch him in the area of sport you are bringing immense pressure to bear."

french-Beytagh also wants to see labor unions taking action on the South African question by discouraging tradesmen from going to South Africa to work.

Withdrawal of skilled white labor, he said, would force the employment of blacks in positions above laboring jobs.

He also believes Commonwealth preferences should be withdrawn from South Africa, which is no longer part of the Commonwealth.

Such action, he believes, is necessary, as there is no hope of a successful uprising against the government within the country.

All the intellectuals, lawyers, doctors and people of influence who could have led such an uprising are imprisoned on Robin's Island off Cape Town, many of them for life, after being charged under the Terrorist Act. There are about 1,000 to 1,200 men, all potential leaders, imprisoned there.

There will be, he predicted, acts of violence, because human beings cannot stand without protest the kind of treatment given the blacks.

The black men, he said, are treated as slaves, considered simply as a labor pool. Wives and children are regarded as encumbrances, and education up to a primary level (enough to make them adequate laborers) is provided for blacks only if it is paid for — white children are educated free.

There are 17 million black people there, ruled by 3½ million whites, and such a rule can only continue, he said, with security police, paid informers and other similar means.

People being interrogated have died during questioning, although such deaths have always been ruled accidental.

"Do you believe this? I don't," he told about 400 people who went to Christ Church Cathedral to hear him speak.

All this, he said, is being done in the name of a Christian government — the Dutch Reformed Church stands wholeheartedly behind the government and the Afrikaan people are deeply religious.

They believe that apartheid is the will of God.

Fifth Seeks Job On School Board

Advocating more control of expenditures and more community use of school facilities, John Sullivan, 38, of 302-707 Esquimalt Road, has filed his nomination papers as a candidate for Greater Victoria school board in the Dec. 9 civic elections. He is the fifth to declare his intention to run.

Sullivan, who is financial chairman at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, has also been a private school teacher.

"I am familiar with both private and public school systems," he said, "I believe it's time for some new blood on the school board."

As a brother in the Salesian order of St. John Bosco, Sullivan was involved with the financing of some private schools in California.

He was born and raised in Victoria, leaving the city when he entered a seminary, Don Bosco College in Newton, N.J.

He taught in Salesian schools in California, later becoming registrar and administrator of finance in one of the high schools.

He returned to Victoria in 1970.

Sullivan, who wants to see a improved drug program in public schools, is active in community affairs. He is on the board of the St. Vincent de Paul Society. He is interested in the local Autistic Society, is political chairman of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, Local 276, at the Empress Hotel where he is employed as a timekeeper, a Knights of Columbus member, and a director of Victoria Taxi.

Victoria Supports Pollen

Mayor Peter Pollen's endeavor to have the Capital Region declared a regional economic expansion area was backed Thursday by Victoria city council.

The idea was also endorsed last Tuesday by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

Pollen's plan is to get Ottawa to declare the Capital Region a designated area under the federal government's regional economic expansion department.

The idea is to take advantage of the incentives offered under the expansion program to attract secondary industry.

Following approval by all Greater Victoria-area councils, the resolution is to be sent on to the Capital Regional Board, which is to submit it to the federal government.

The Kootenays is the only area in B.C. under the program. Incentives offered industry for locating in designated areas go as high as 25 per cent of the cost of building a new plant, plus up to $5,000 for each new job created.

Mail Delays Explained

Although many delays in mail service are occurring, Canada Post Office is continuing to handle the bulk of its mail efficiently, Victoria post office spokesman Ken Stofer said Thursday. Stofer acknowledged it often takes three or four days for delivery on the Vancouver-Victoria run. Among reasons given are unusually heavy mail volume, turnover of staff at the Vancouver office and changes in sorting systems.
